In this e-zine format, you’ll see the full Community Portrait that was featured in our September 2018 issue.

The Sarasota region is an important part of the Florida economy — population here totals more than 420,000.

Sarasota is particularly wealthy but not that diverse as 83% of the population describes itself as white, with only about 9% Hispanic and 4% African American.

And the city you know as the heart of the county — Sarasota itself — isn’t even the largest municipality in the county. That honor goes to North Port, a fast-growing city which enjoys more favorable home prices.

Sarasota County is the home of major companies like PGT (maker of doors and windows), Tervis (the drinkware people), FCCI (insurance), and of course my friends at Publix.

And there’s a huge service industry with multiple law firms, private banks, accounting companies, and medical centers like Sarasota Memorial (with its 5-star rating), Venice Medical Center, Lakewood Ranch Medical Center, the Roskamp Institute, and the Dattoli Cancer Center.

What else is here? Travelers to Sarasota use Sarasota-Bradenton Airport or the I-75 corridor which connects Sarasota to points north like Tampa or even Atlanta . . . and to points south like Naples or the Miami-Fort Lauderdale-Palm Beach region.

Sarasota is the home base for major schools like New College, The Ringling College of Art and Design, State College of Manatee-Sarasota, and USF Sarasota/Manatee.

But you can’t talk about Sarasota without mentioning the arts — this area is home to the Ringling Museum of Art, the Asolo Theater, Van Wezel performing arts center, Marie Selby Gardens, or the famed Mote Martine Laboratory and Museum.

In terms of sports, you have spring training for the Baltimore Orioles and soon the Atlanta Braves plus Nathan Benderson Park with its state-of-the-art rowing facility. Plus of course shopping — there’s hardly a location that has more. Take a visit and see for yourself.

FLORIDA TREND will continue its series of business and community portraits in coming editions. I invite you to subscribe to the print edition to you don’t miss a single information. Information on how to contact us is printed below.

We look forward to hearing from you, especially if you take a deep dive into the Sarasota County region with its growth and excitement.

Sarasota County

By Lynn Waddell
Growth Magnet

From Sarasota County’s northern border with Manatee to Charlotte County on its southern edge, signs of growth are everywhere. Start with downtown Sarasota, the county’s professional and cultural heart. New condos, apartment buildings, high-rise hotels, tony shops and offices are up or in progress all around downtown. The city of roughly 57,000 has seen 4,000 new housing units in the past three years. Sarasota is experiencing what City Manager Tom Barwin says is “probably the biggest growth spurt in the city’s history.”

Sarasota isn’t even the largest city in the county any more. In the county’s southern tier, North Port, with more affordable housing and a younger population (median age of 44), is now home to about 66,000 residents. Ruth Buchanan, North Port economic development manager, calls it “the workforce engine for the metro area.”

The influx of new residents is dominated by wealthy Baby Boomer retirees but includes young families and entrepreneurial millennials. Overall, the county’s population has grown by 16% since 2010.

Fueling all the growth is the area’s wealth, a healthy economy and a high quality of life. The county’s barrier island beaches rank among the finest in the world. Sarasota’s arts and cultural scene tops that of many cities three times its size. It has top-rated hospitals, and its public schools rank among the state’s best. It’s home to a campus of Florida State University’s medical school, the highly regarded Ringling College of Art and Design and New College, the honors college of the State University System.

MoneyRates.com named the Sarasota MSA the nation’s best for young entrepreneurs. WalletHub ranked Sarasota the No. 1 Florida city for jobs in 2018.

Seven Things to Know About Sarasota

- Sarasota has been a circus town since John and Charles Ringling made it the winter home of their circus in 1927. Though Ringling Brothers has dissolved, a museum and a small but vibrant community of artists, including the Flying Wallendas, and the Circus Arts Conservatory maintain the circus’s legacy in the area.

- With more than 20,000 plants, Marie Selby Botanical Gardens is the world’s only botanical garden dedicated to the display and study of epiphytes — plants that derive moisture and nutrients from the air, including orchids, bromeliads and ferns. Located in the heart of Sarasota on the bay, the property was once home to Texaco oil tycoon William Selby and his wife, Marie, who donated the land to the city. Open to the public, the gardens are also a popular setting for society events and weddings.

- In addition to an impressive list of current and former CEOs who call Sarasota County home, several celebrities also live here at least part of the year, including author Stephen King, Aerosmith guitarist Joe Perry, sportscaster Dick Vitale, actress Jane Lynch, AC/DC lead singer Brian Johnson, talk show host Jerry Springer and tennis coach Nick Bollettieri (right).
Vital Statistics

Sarasota County
Size: 555.9 square miles
Population: 419,119
White Non-Hispanic: 83.2%
Hispanic or Latino: 8.9%
Black/African-American: 4.2%
Other: 3.7%

Notable: Sarasota County includes four incorporated municipalities along with unincorporated communities, farmland and protected lands. More than 60% of its residents live in the county’s unincorporated areas. Many residents are seasonal; the population grows by around 25% in the winter. Based on U.S. Census records, the county’s median age of 55.7 skews higher than the national average of 38.2. But the overall metro area, which includes Bradenton to the north in Manatee County, was the eighth-fastest growing U.S. metro area for millennials between 2010 and 2015, according to the Brookings Institute.

Sarasota (city)
Size: 14.7 square miles
Population: 56,994
White: 64.1%
Hispanic or Latino: 18.2%
Black/African-American: 14.8%
Other: 2.9%

Notable: Sarasota, including Lido and Bird Keys, is the county seat, financial center and shopping, entertainment and cultural heart of the area. The vibrancy of downtown and the city’s hospitality industry is reflected by the fact that revenue generated by dining and lodging in the city accounts for more than 40% of all revenue generated by the county’s hospitality industry.

Longboat Key

- Size: 4.1 square miles
- Population: 7,292
- White: 95.9%
- Non-White Hispanic: 1.8%
- Other: 2.3%

  Notable: Longboat Key is divided between Sarasota and Manatee counties. It’s retiree-heavy, with a median age of 71, less than 2% of residents under 18 and more than 68% over 65. Residents are also on average wealthier (per capita income of $97,221 in 2016) and more highly educated (63.1% have a bachelor’s degree or higher.)

North Port

- Size: 103 square miles
- Population: 66,300
- White: 80.8%
- Non-White Hispanic: 6.5%
- Black/African American: 7.7%
- Other: 5.0%

  Notable: North Port is the fastest-growing city in Sarasota County and one of Florida’s largest cities by land mass. It grew 15.7% between 2010 and 2017 and surpassed Sarasota as the most populated municipality in the county. Its residents are also younger, with a median age of 45.9. Housing is more affordable than in the northern part of the county, with a median home value of just over $200,000, according to Zillow.

Venice

- Size: 15.3 square miles
- Population: 23,020
- White: 94.6%
- Non-White Hispanic: 2.3%
- Black/African American: 1.0%
- Other: 2.1%

  Notable: Venice’s population leans toward retirement age, with 58.8% of residents 65 or older, though residents on average are less affluent than in Longboat Key, the only municipality with a higher percentage of retirees; per capita income in 2016 was $32,450.

Unincorporated Communities

- Communities: Nokomis, Siesta Key, Casey Key, Manasota Key, Osprey, Englewood and Lakewood Ranch

  Notable: Communities along the Gulf swell during winter season. Englewood and Lakewood Ranch are special tax districts. Until recently, Lakewood Ranch’s footprint in Sarasota County was limited to commercial development.

Growth Rate Estimates 2010-17

- North Port: 15.6%
- Venice: 11.0%
- Sarasota County: 10.5%
- Sarasota: 9.5%
- Longboat Key: 5.9%

Politics

Sarasota County is strongly Republican, though traditionally more fiscally conservative than socially conservative. Republicans make up 42.5% of registered voters, with 30.3% registered as Democrats and 27.1% registered as no party affiliation.

The city of Sarasota has a commission-manager form of government. The five-member elected commission appoints the city manager, who acts as the chief city administrative officer. The commission also annually elects a mayor among them. The mayor serves a ceremonial role.

Development

More than 13,000 people worked in the county’s construction industry in 2017, a 4% increase over 2016, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. While most construction has been residential, major developments in the works include hotels, multi-million-dollar attractions and a sports venue.

The city of Sarasota leads in mixed-use and high-rise development, clustered in and around downtown. In the past three years, the city has gained 4,000 residential units, primarily around downtown. Twenty-eight projects are under construction, and another 46 are planned.

The Quay on the downtown waterfront is the largest private development in downtown Sarasota. Jacksonville-based GreenPointe Communities broke ground in May on the $1-billion mixed-use project that will include condo towers, apartments, restaurants, retail and possibly a hotel. Build-out is expected to take seven years.

Adjacent to the Quay, the city plans to redevelop 52 acres of public land along Sarasota Bay that currently includes arts facilities, an auditorium and a public boat launch. The preliminary design for The Bay project includes space for a new performing arts center, renovation of existing historic buildings, underground parking, a large public park, an amphitheater, an iconic pier and a redesigned boat launch. The project is expected to cost up to $150 million, not including the cost of the performing arts center. It is anticipated to take up to 25 years to complete.

Marie Selby Botanical Gardens is raising funds for a $67-million redesign and expects to break ground within a year. Mote Marine Laboratory plans to build a $130-million aquarium and education center along I-75 with construction to begin in 2019, contingent on fundraising efforts.

Lakewood Ranch, the second-fastest growing planned community in the United States in mid-2018, plans to build 5,000 homes in Sarasota County, which until now has only housed commercial pieces of the development.

To the south in North Port and unincorporated Sarasota County, the West Villages ranks as the fifth-fastest growing master-planned community in the nation for the second year in a row. Mattamy Homes and Vanguard Land partnered in the 15,000-acre development that has been approved for 33,000 units. About 4,000 homes have been sold and roughly 1,000 more are under construction. Prices range from the low $200,000s to $600,000. The project will also include a town center and a $100-million Atlanta Braves spring training complex, which is scheduled to be completed by 2020.

Health Care and Life Science

- The Sarasota Memorial Healthcare System is the county’s largest employer. Sarasota Memorial Hospital has received the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services’ top rating for four consecutive ratings periods. It has more than 800 hospital beds and plans to build a 90-bed hospital in Venice starting next April.

- Doctors Hospital of Sarasota, also top-rated by the CMS, opened an emergency center in Lakewood Ranch. “We saw a need for high quality emergency care in this area,” says Robert Meade, CEO of Doctors Hospital of Sarasota.

- Venice Regional Bayfront Health is replacing its existing hospital with a 210-bed facility.

- Lakewood Ranch Medical Center, a 120-bed hospital, is undergoing a $20-million expansion.

- The Roskamp Institute seeks cures for neuropsychiatric and neurodegenerative disorders and addictions.

- Shared Services Center provides office support like billing, call-center customer service and data entry.

- CAE Healthcare manufactures medical patient simulators.

- RPS, a biotech firm, makes point-of-care tests for rapid diagnosis of infectious diseases.

- Dattoli Cancer Center & Brachytherapy Research Institute specializes in non-surgical prostate cancer treatment.

Manufacturing

The percentage of Sarasota’s economy constituted by manufacturing is slightly larger than the state average. Nearly 8,400 people worked in manufacturing in 2017, a 1.2% growth over the prior year. Combined with neighboring Manatee County, the area has an estimated 600 manufacturers and related businesses, according to the Sarasota-Manatee Manufacturers Association.

- Many manufacturers are small to medium sized, such as RND Automation and Engineering, a custom machine builder. Others are among the county’s largest employers, including publicly traded PGT Innovations, a window and door manufacturer in Venice. In March, PGT opened a 7,500-sq.-ft. child-care center for its 2,000 employees.

- ASO, which has a division headquarters in Sarasota, is a major producer of adhesive bandages.

- L-3 Communications makes flight “black box” recorders.

- PGT, with 2,000 employees, continues to expand in Sarasota.

- CruiseCar, a manufacturer of low-speed vehicles, now also assembles and sells the European Electric Moke at its home base in Sarasota.

- Sun Hydraulics, a manufacturer of screw-in hydraulic cartridge valves, continues to grow, recently acquiring the Italian Faster Group, a global manufacturer of quick-release hydraulic couplings.

Tourism

Tourism’s economic impact last year was just under $2 billion. Visit Sarasota County estimates that 24,700 people work in tourism-related jobs, the equivalent of 13% of the county’s employed workforce.

More than 1.2 million people stayed at lodging places in Sarasota County in 2017, a 4.2% increase over the year before. In the first six months of fiscal 2018, visits were up 2.8% over the same period last year.

On the horizon are a new Atlanta Braves spring training complex and a new Mote Marine Aquarium and renovated Marie Selby Botanical Gardens. Another 1,100 hotel rooms will be added to the market this year.

Professional Services

Professional and business services companies employ more than 25,000 people in Sarasota County.

Several area law firms are nationally ranked by U.S. News & World Report, including Shumaker, Loop & Kendrick; Adams and Reese; and Williams Parker.

FCCI Insurance provides property and casualty insurance and has $2.4 billion in assets.

S-One Holdings is parent to eight brands and companies that offer everything from a crafters social network to inkjet printing.

Sylint Group secures cyber networks and does data forensics for Fortune 500 companies.

CSi Networks designs, installs and maintains computer networks.

The area has a wealth of innovative digital marketing firms that are growing, including atLarge, Clickbooth, Dealers United, AdRizer and Floorforce. On Ideas, which handles traditional and digital marketing, recently landed Fresh Market as a client. Patricia Courtois, On Ideas’ chief client officer, says, “It’s time to grow young creative talent with vibrant high-paying jobs in our organization.”

Financial Services

The area’s wealth has made the financial services sector a strong part of the economy, and the sector has rebounded strongly since the recession: More than 9,000 people work in financial services in the county today.

The county is home to community banks (Sabal Palm Bank, 1st Manatee Bank, Englewood Bank & Trust, Charlotte State Bank) along with regional (Bank of Tampa) and a plethora of national banks (PNC Bank, BB&T, Bank of America, Wells Fargo, SunTrust and others).

Global Financial Private Capital, one of the largest investment funds in the Tampa Bay region, is based in Sarasota with $5.7 billion in assets under management and 166 employees.

Job Growth

The county has roughly 4,500 more workers this year than it did a year earlier. Fiscal 2017 statistics show growth driven by the construction, health care/education and leisure/hospitality sectors.

The Face of Labor

When Christine Eckles’ children left the nest in Sharon, Pa., she and her husband did, too, at least during the winter. A registered nurse, Eckles became a traveling nurse and worked on both coasts of Florida for a couple of winters before she and her husband decided to make a permanent move. They chose Sarasota County.

“We fell in love with the area. We are definitely beach people, and we like having a city close, but also being in a small community,” Eckles says. “My first assignment was in Delray Beach, and it felt like a big city. Everything was rushed. We came over here to Doctors Hospital, and I just loved it.”

Eckles, 46, got a permanent nursing job at Doctors Hospital in Sarasota. She and her husband rent in nearby Bradenton, while they search for an affordable home near her job.

The annual mean average salary for registered nurses in the Sarasota-Manatee County MSA is $65,160.

“The wages down here are better,” Eckles says. “I make significantly more, but the houses are crazy expensive. Up there for $300,000 you can get a nice five-bedroom, two-bath house. Here you might be able to get a small two-one-for that.”

Sarasota Community Portrait

K-12

Sarasota’s public schools consistently rank among the best in Florida and the nation. The county has 33 private schools, two-thirds of which are religiously affiliated.

The Sarasota County School District is one of only two in Florida to maintain an “A” rating every year since the state started the grading system in 2004.

Sarasota County residents value public education even though many may not have school-age children. Last year, a referendum to renew an additional 1 mill property tax for schools — the maximum the state allows — passed with 79% of the vote. The extra tax generates about $56 million annually and allows for higher-than-state-average teacher pay, longer school days and broader curriculums.

The school district is one of only six in the nation that participates in Kennedy Center’s Any Given Child program, which strives to provide access to arts education to every K-8 student. The National School Boards Association and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts have recognized the district for its success.

In addition to traditional schools, the Sarasota County School District has magnet schools. U.S. News & World Report rated Pine View High School for the Gifted the No. 1 high school in Florida and 19th in the nation. Suncoast Polytechnical High School has a career and technology-driven curriculum. The district also allows high school students dual enrollment in Suncoast Technical College.

Higher Education

Higher education in Sarasota County ranges from satellite campuses of Florida’s larger universities to small colleges to technical school. In 2017, the Cross College Alliance was formed to expand learning opportunities and allow a seamless educational experience among five major area institutes, including the University of South Florida-Sarasota/Manatee, New College of Florida, the Ringling College of Art, the State College of Sarasota/Manatee and the Ringling College of Art and Design.

USF-Sarasota/Manatee has roughly 2,000 students and offers more than 40 bachelor’s and master’s degrees and professional certificate programs from a nationally ranked research university. The USF campus also takes advantage of its location by partnering with Mote Marine Laboratory, which provides classroom space and opportunities to intern with world-renowned marine scientists.

New College of Florida is a top-ranked public liberal arts university with just under 1,000 students. New College has plans to double its enrollment by 2022.

State College of Florida, Manatee-Sarasota works closely with the business community and offers a range of bachelor’s degrees, certificate programs and adult education courses, including a nursing program that ranks fourth in the state.

The arts loom large and are integrated into math, science and other classes. Every public school in grades K-12 has at least one arts and one music teacher.

Suncoast Technical College provides a local workforce trained in computer technology, health, criminal justice, human services and industry trades.

The Sarasota/Manatee County area is also home to campuses of private regional and national colleges, including the Lake Erie College of Osteopathic Medicine in Bradenton, Keiser University and Everglades College.

Arts

In 2017, the non-profit arts sector contributed nearly $3 billion to the local economy and employed 7,445, according to a national study by Americans for the Arts.

Sarasota's wealth of art traces back to circus magnate John Ringling, who in 1931 opened the John and Mable Ringling Museum of Art to house his personal collection. Today, the museum property, now owned by the state, is home to the Circus Museum; the Asolo Repertory Theatre, the largest professional non-profit theater south of Atlanta; and the Florida State University/Asolo Conservatory for Actor Training.

Downtown, the Sarasota Opera stages productions in a 1,100-seat historic theater. Meanwhile, the iconic purple seashell-shaped Van Wezel performing arts center hosts more than 100 events a year, including performances by the Sarasota Orchestra, Sarasota Ballet and international performers. The city-owned landmark, designed by the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation and Taliesan Associated Architects, entertains 265,000 visitors a year.

In a nod to Sarasota's past, the Circus Arts Conservatory and Sarasota or Circus Academy stage big-top performances throughout the year.

Community theaters, art galleries, history museums and cultural events abound throughout the county. Per capita, Venice Theater is the largest non-profit community theater in the nation. The red carpet rolls out for 10 days during Sarasota Film Festival. The Sarasota Festival of Arts brings about 250 arts vendors to downtown.

Beaches

Sarasota County has six barrier islands, all with public beach areas. Longboat Key is lined with beachfront condo towers and miles of golf courses. Siesta Key contains more bungalow and low-rise structures.

Popular with families, Siesta Beach tops many national “best beaches” list. Lido Key beaches are near St. Armands Circle, a shopping and entertainment district.

Casey Key, with mansions nestled among mangroves, is a sleepy slice of island with a sprinkling of rentals and the oldest beach park in the county. Venice beaches are known as a good place to find fossilized shark teeth. Venice also has the only dog-friendly beach in the county. Nature lovers, fishermen and kayakers gravitate to Manasota Key, which has secluded beaches and mangrove-lined waterways.

Parks and Preserves

Sarasota County has thousands of acres of parks and nature preserves, including the 12.5-mile Legacy Trail, a former rail spur that runs from Sarasota to Venice. The county also has two state parks. At 37,000 acres, Myakka River State Park is one of the state's largest. Oscar Scherer State Park skirts the coast between Sarasota and Venice.

Transportation

I-75 is the major access point from Tampa Bay to the north and Naples to the south. Major local and state roadway expansions are in the works throughout the county, which has also adopted the Complete Streets program, with plans to make streets safer for pedestrian and cyclists.

Air Canada, American Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Elite Airways, JetBlue Airways, United Airlines and Allegiant offer flights to Sarasota-Bradenton International Airport. Visitors can fly commercial non-stop to Sarasota from 14 U.S. and Canadian cities. Venice Municipal Airport offers private, corporate and charter flights.

The Sarasota County Area Transit (SCAT) has about 25 bus routes and an express bus service between North Port and Sarasota. The Siesta Key Beach Free Trolley runs seven days a week between Turtle Beach and Siesta Village.

Sarasota’s Ed Smith Stadium has been the spring training home for the Baltimore Orioles since 2010. It has an economic impact of $97 million annually, according to a study commissioned by Sarasota County. The Atlanta Braves are expected to join the Orioles in 2020 as the team moves its spring training to North Port from Kissimmee. Construction is underway on the Braves’ $100-million sports complex in the West Villages planned community.

The county is also home to Nathan Benderson Park, a 400-acre public lake with a state-of-the-art rowing facility that hosted the World Rowing Championships last fall. Fox Lea Farms in Venice is a national hot spot for horse shows and hosts more than 160 events a year. In addition, there is an equestrian arena and polo fields.

Other Attractions

Mote Marine Laboratory & Aquarium on City Island in Sarasota is a popular tourist attraction in addition to being a world-renowned oceanic research facility. If a fundraising campaign succeeds, the non-profit plans to move its aquarium to Nathan Benderson Park in 2020.

Economic Development

Several chambers, associations and economic development groups in Sarasota County help economic development. Primary organizations include:

- Economic Development Corporation of Sarasota County — The EDC is the business go-to for information on local incentives, development sites, financing and permitting. It is also a conduit to other local, state and national assistance organizations. Its economic gardening program provides existing companies with mentoring, strategic analysis and other assistance.

- Argus Foundation — The non-profit composed of top business leaders serves as a think tank and a government watchdog group that interacts with civic leaders and other business groups in contributing to public dialogue.

- Greater Sarasota Chamber of Commerce — The county’s largest chamber of commerce offers networking opportunities, along with a Leadership Sarasota County program that helps identify and groom future business and civic leaders. It sponsors a Young Professionals Group and offers members access to Shumaker Chamber University educational events.

- Other chambers — Englewood Chamber of Commerce, Longboat Key Chamber of Commerce, Osprey Nokomis Florida Chamber of Commerce, North Port Area Chamber of Commerce, Siesta Key Chamber of Commerce and Venice Area Chamber of Commerce.

Challenges

Growth and prosperity don’t come without challenges:

- Affordable Housing: The median list price of homes in Sarasota County was $339,000 in June and median rent was $2,200, according to Zillow. Many service workers choose to buy or rent in more affordable areas in the county’s southern tier or in Manatee County to the north.

- Transportation: One in five jobs in the county is within a short distance of I-75. Commuting patterns, along with increased tourism and development, has increased traffic throughout the county.

- Aging Population: Sarasota’s median age of 55.7 is substantially higher than the U.S. median age of 38.2. Despite an increase in millennials, the county is still growing older faster than it is growing younger. In 2009, the median age was 50.7, and those 65 and older made up 29.6% of the population, according to U.S. Census estimates. In 2017, those 65 and older made up 36.1% of the population.

- Sea-Level Rise: Located on the Gulf of Mexico, Sarasota County is susceptible to volatile weather and sea-level rise. The city of Sarasota ranks the second in the U.S. among cities most vulnerable to the economic impacts of rising seas, falling only behind Miami Beach, according to a 2018 report by Four Twenty Seven, an advisory firm that studies the economic impacts of climate change. Sarasota Bay has risen 7 inches since 1947. To mitigate the impact, the city is also in the process of evaluating all public property and roads that may be at risk and developing a plan to move or alter as necessary.

Impact Players

Tom Barwin
City Manager, Sarasota

Tom Barwin runs the city on a day-to-day basis, answering to the five-member city commission. Barwin oversees about 500 full-time and 200 part-time employees and a roughly $200-million budget. He’s also the only public official on the board of the Bay Project, a signature project that is expected to define the city in the coming years.

Barwin has an ambitious, progressive agenda for Sarasota. He wants it to lead Florida in environmental protection and achieve a zero-carbon footprint by 2040. Transportation is a priority as well: Barwin wants to make it easier to get around, whether by car, foot or bicycle, even as the city grows.

Before being hired in 2012, Barwin was city manager of Oak Park Village, Ill., an artsy suburb of Chicago where he led the city to become 95% powered by renewable energy.

“In my profession, what I enjoy is a city this size because it’s about getting to know a lot of the people, and you can see the fruits of your labor,” says Barwin.

Mark Pritchett
President/CEO, Gulf Coast Community Foundation

Mark Pritchett guides one of Florida’s largest philanthropic foundations, which has more than $330 million in assets. In addition to issuing grants, the foundation does catalytic philanthropy — seeking to make substantial change through research and leadership in areas from economic development to arts and education.

Such initiatives are what attracted Pritchett to the foundation in 2008 after 13 years in state public policy research. “It was a big career change for me,” Pritchett says. “But I couldn’t be happier.”

Pritchett oversees a staff of 18. He also has served as vice president of the Florida Chamber of Commerce and Enterprise Florida.

Michael Saunders
Founder/CEO, Michael Saunders & Co.

Michael Saunders started as a high school teacher, then become a juvenile court counselor. A single mom, she needed to earn more and got her real estate license. After four years as an agent, she borrowed $5,000 and opened a real estate office in 1976 on St. Armands Circle back when St. Armands wasn’t as bustling as it is now.

Today, her company is the largest real estate brokerage in Sarasota, Manatee and Charlotte counties. It has 24 full-service real estate offices with nearly 700 agents spanning Southwest Florida. In 2017, Saunders & Co.’s sales topped $2.75 billion, ranking it the 67th-largest brokerage in dollar volume among the top 500 in the U.S.

Saunders has funded a slew of local charitable programs for children. She’s an honorary board member of Mote Marine Laboratory, past chairman of the board of Marie Selby Gardens and has won numerous state and local awards, including Ernst & Young’s Entrepreneur of the Year award.

Bayne Beecher
President, Sarasota-Manatee Area Manufacturers Association; production control manager, PGT Industries

Bayne Beecher is the voice of the area’s manufacturing industry through the Sarasota-Manatee Area Manufacturers Association (SAMA). As a mechanical engineer for Sarasota County’s largest manufacturer, PGT Industries, he’s aware of the challenges manufacturers face in finding labor and has worked to educate area youth about the potential of manufacturing jobs.

“I love manufacturing, and I love what manufacturing does for an economy as a multiplier, so I’m not opposed to making personal sacrifices,” Beecher says referring to the time he devotes speaking to high school students.

After graduating from the University of Illinois Champaign-Urbana, Beecher and his wife, both natives of Jamaica, were drawn to Florida’s climate. He worked for Eaton Corp., Delphi-Mechatronics and Stoneridge before joining PGT Industries in 2008. A certified Six Sigma Black Belt — a professional who can teach and explain the Six Sigma techniques used in improving manufacturing and other processes — he also holds an MBA from Webster University and serves on the board of FloridaMakes, Florida’s NIST Manufacturing Extension Partnership center.

Craig A. Johnson
Chairman, President and CEO, FCCI Insurance Group

As head of one of the state’s largest commercial insurers, Craig Johnson works at fostering a culture that consistently puts FCCI on lists of best companies to work for while also growing the company’s revenue. Johnson started as an accountant at Deloitte & Touche in Baltimore and worked for USF&G and American Skyline Insurance before becoming vice president and controller at FCCI in 2003. He says the offer came at the right time. His family was young, and it gave them a chance to settle in Sarasota. He became FCCI’s executive vice president/CFO/treasurer in 2006 and president/CEO in 2011.

In the past five years, FCCI has expanded to 19 states and the District of Columbia and increased its workforce from 724 to 830. Revenue has climbed from $586 million to $836 million.

“We’ve watched Sarasota grow and have grown with it. Our business started off in support of Florida businesses,” Johnson says. “Today, we support businesses all over the country while keeping our roots in Sarasota and supporting the local economy.”
For more than three decades, The Bank of Tampa has continually worked to deliver a client experience like no other in the communities we serve. Our promise is to continue that approach as we invest in Sarasota.

Building relationships and expanding our vision for community banking.

Newcomer Impressions

Michael Donahue
Web Developer, AtLarge

One recent winter in Boston, Michael Donahue, 35, says, “We had 10 feet of snow, and it had been coming down for seven days.” He came down to Sarasota on vacation, stayed with a friend — “and didn’t go back.”

Donahue had visited his friend for years and his grandparents before that. He had seen downtown Sarasota transform from a sleepy retirement enclave to a place where there was lots more to do and more people his age to do it with.

He now lives downtown just a block from his office. He says he rarely leaves the downtown area because he can walk to work, the supermarket and restaurants. He and his girlfriend share a car.

“I feel like here you can have more impact on the community because it’s much smaller,” he says. “It’s growing fast, and there’s lots of resources to help that growth along.”

Maria Mandler
Retired

Maria Mandler, 65, and her husband, an attorney, have lived all over the world. They were living in Chicago when they decided to retire. Mandler’s husband, a tennis buff, was drawn to the tennis community at the Colony Beach and Tennis Resort and IMG Academy in nearby Bradenton.

“We also like the beaches and the cultural aspects. I enjoy dance of all kinds,” says Mandler, who had been managing director of Global Transaction Services at Bank of America Merrill Lynch. After a couple of winters, they made the full leap and became year-round residents in downtown Sarasota. Being able to walk to restaurants while also having the beaches close by was important to them, she says.

In addition to adapting to retirement for the past two years, she’s adjusting to not having an international hub airport close by.

Stefani Dueol
Television Producer/Novelist

As a freelance television producer and author, Stefani Dueol can live just about anywhere, but she landed near downtown Sarasota in 2016. “I had two requirements: It had to be within a reasonable drive of a major airport and it had to have Broadway show tours. I’m a New Yorker, and Broadway plays are my love.”

When Dueol’s partner, a nurse, decided to retire, they scouted locations in Florida. “We looked at Delray. We looked at Lauderdale, but nothing felt like home,” Dueol says.

They considered St. Petersburg, but what sold them on Sarasota was a stay at Lido Key. “I got in the water, and said ‘I’m home. I’m done.’”

They chose to live in Arlington Park, south of downtown and a short drive or bicycle ride to the beach. It took a year for an older home that was affordable and habitable to become available. Other than missing family and friends, Dueol says the only thing she longs for is regional public transit. “Why don’t they have light rail from Sarasota to St. Pete and Tampa?”

Destin Wells
Vice President, Economic Development Corporation of Sarasota County

Destin Wells was living in Orlando and had no desire to leave his job as director of aviation/aerospace/defense with Enterprise Florida when he got a call about a job in Sarasota late last year. “I had a great gig. I was traveling all over the world. My knee-jerk reaction was, no, not really, but thank you. I had my preconceived notions. Sarasota had a reputation of being complacent.”

Wells visited Sarasota for an interview. To his surprise, the EDC business center was filled with startup tech companies. He stayed for the weekend. “The quality of life was obvious. I started to think this might be a real opportunity.”

He dug a little deeper. As a father, Wells was attracted to the quality of Sarasota’s schools, and as an economic developer, he believed he’d found something he could work with. “All the puzzle pieces are here. Good public education, good higher education, incentive programs and the ability to put together good deals, a diverse industrial base,” Wells says. “It feels like a market ready to explode. For an economic developer, you can’t ask for more than that.”
