

At Missouri State, we discovered what it meant to be invested in something bigger than ourselves.

Here, we learned how to make a promise and then live that commitment fully.

We learned to lead, not with self-importance, but with humility and intention.

Here, we found our voice and we will make it heard.

TO FOSTER PURPOSE, TO BUILD INTEGRITY,
TO INSPIRE OUR CURRENT AND FUTURE ALUMS,
WE MAKE OUR MISSOURI STATEMENT.

McQueary family makes "transformational" gift

The College of Health and Human Services has been renamed in honor of the family's support, which will go toward classrooms, scholarships and support for faculty.

Health care is one of the fastest growing industries in the United States. And it's one of the industries in Missouri with the biggest gap between demand and qualified workers.

A significant gift from the McQueary family will help close this gap.

Missouri State University announced in October that the College of Health and Human Services has been renamed in honor of the McQueary Family.

"This transformational gift will allow the McQueary College of Health and Human Services to grow to better meet the demand for skilled health care employees in southwest Missouri," said former Dean Helen Reid.

How this gift will help

The McQueary College of Health and Human Services offers 17 undergraduate programs, 21 graduate and six graduate certificate programs.

The McQueary gift will fund:

- Addition of a large lecture room/ classroom to the McQueary Family Health Sciences Hall.
- Additional student scholarships for the college.
- Support for faculty within the college.

"We all know that the health care needs of our community and our state are growing exponentially," said Dr. Fred McQueary. "Everywhere you look, the demand far outstrips the supply. The aging of us baby boomers means we are looking at more, older, sicker Americans in the very near future."

McQueary noted more than 20 percent of the nation's job growth in the past two years was in the health care field. Additionally, 34 percent of registered nurses in Missouri are over the age of 55.

"We have to fill these positions and expand our health care workforce to meet the projected increasing needs."

Over the years, the McQueary family has made multiple gifts to different areas of the university, including scholarships, athletics, Juanita K. Hammons Hall for the Performing Arts, Greenwood Laboratory School, the Child Development Center, Tent Theatre and the Pride Band. They have also made previous gifts to the colleges of Arts and Letters, Business, and Health and Human Services.

"Members of the McQueary family have been friends of Missouri State University for many years," said President Clif Smart. "Many members of the family have also been members and leaders of university boards and committees.

"This family has touched many, many lives. We're grateful for their long-term support of Missouri State."

About the McQueary family

William M. McQueary started a family business in the early 1900s when he opened a drugstore on the corner of Madison and John Q. Hammons Parkway. William McQueary's sons, William Les and Frederick Gordon McQueary, then founded McQueary Brothers Drug Company in 1924.

The McQueary family's legacy of giving was inspired by Les and Jennie McQueary, who enjoyed Missouri State

"In a very few years, the students here today will be taking care of us. We want and need them to become great providers of care.

As a family, I know we all appreciate the opportunity to help them be the very best they can be."

athletics. The couple's children, Fred M. McQueary and the late William T. "Bill" McQueary, served as the first co-chairs of the Bears Fund in 1982.

Fred and Ramona McQueary and Bill and Shirley McQueary, and their families, have continued the long tradition of support of Missouri State University.

In 2007, the McQuearys were recognized for their multigenerational involvement with MSU when they were awarded the Bronze Bear award.

Committee steers Greenwood into the future

The laboratory school's growth signifies a dedication to improving student experiences.

Greenwood Laboratory School will be seeing a lot of positive change in the next few years. A multimillion-dollar expansion is scheduled for completion in fall 2020.

"There is definitely a need for facility improvement as the school offers more opportunities for students," said Darla Rosen, member of the Greenwood expansion steering committee.

The expansion will include a 21,000 square-foot multipurpose center housing a new gymnasium and a performance stage.

"The current Greenwood building is just over 50 years old," Rosen said.

This expansion project signals a new era for the K-12 laboratory school.

The steering committee has been one of the biggest influences in getting the expansion project moving forward.

"I felt strongly that committing to the steering committee was a way to give back to my children, MSU and the community," Rosen said. "Greenwood has served so many families in Springfield for more than 110 years. Supporting this cause has been rewarding and gratifying to me and my family."

The steering committee – nicknamed the "proud Greenwood parents" – was established in 2014.

"We all firmly believed in the opportunity and necessity to improve facilities in order to ensure Greenwood would be around for the next generations," Rosen said.

The multipurpose building construction is now underway.

Rosen has three children at Greenwood. The fourth, 10th and 12th grade students are third-generation Greenwood students. Their father and grandfather are former Greenwood students.

"It has been a great learning environment for each of them," Rosen said.

Keeping generations of Corrys in the Greenwood family

The Corry family has a long history with Greenwood Laboratory schools. Chris (Corry) Litherland and her four siblings are all former students of Greenwood. When asked to describe Greenwood, Dave Litherland, Chris' husband, responded with one word: Family.

Dave and Chris have continued to keep Greenwood in the family.

"We discussed all the possible areas of the country where we might move to raise our family," Dave said.

They chose the familiarity of Springfield and the education Greenwood could offer their kids. "Having our children educated at Greenwood played a significant role in drawing our family back to my wife's roots in Springfield," Dave said.

At Greenwood, their children are able to have the same enriching experience their mother, aunts and uncles had.

"Greenwood may appear small in size, but it is precisely that which allows for it to accomplish so much with its students," Dave said.

Because of the small size, it's typical for Greenwood students to be involved in multiple sports, student government, bands, clubs and community volunteerism. There is a never-ending stream of activities to keep students engaged and challenging academics to help students grow.

Growth feeds potential

The Corry family wanted to give back to the school that had given so much to them. They're invested in getting the expansion project off the ground.

"To me, this project offers a wealth of growth opportunities in our programs and Missouri State," Dave said. "The experiences visiting students have while on campus will put in full view the facilities and opportunities that are available to them close to home at Missouri State. That's a triple win for Greenwood, MSU and Springfield."

Throughout the expansion project, the Corry family plans to support Greenwood through every stage.

"Our family will continue to be involved and supportive of Greenwood even after our last child graduates in four years," Dave said. "We believe it is a very special place that performs an important role in Springfield." They have big dreams for the future of Greenwood and hope the doors stay open for generations to come.

"We want Greenwood to continue to offer a unique educational opportunity that helps to draw to Springfield the new families who are searching for a great place to raise and educate their children," Dave said.

Cook and Daugherty families team up to benefit Greenwood expansion

The Cook Family Foundation and the Daugherty family recently contributed to the new Greenwood Laboratory School multipurpose center.

"Our children attend Greenwood and because of their love of the school, we felt compelled to give back to the school that is giving them so much," said Paula Cook Daugherty, vice president of Loren Cook.

About their support

The Cook Family Foundation and the Daugherty family helped fund the stage and the Hall of Fame Wall features of the expansion project. "The expansion is something our family feels is going to allow for many new amazing things to take place within the walls of Greenwood," Cook Daugherty said.

One of those amazing things includes students taking pride in their school.

"Students, parents, teachers and administration are going to experience a new level of excitement and pride once the project is complete," Cook Daugherty said.

academically, and it would be nice to see this level of excellence within the building itself."

Cook Daugherty also hopes that more business classes could be offered in the future.

"Business knowledge not only benefits those that want to pursue it as a career, but it also provides skills and knowledge in managing life outside the workplace," Cook Daugherty said.

Into the future

Once this project is complete, the Cook Family Foundation and the Daugherty family want to see Greenwood grow.

"In the next few years, we would love to see an investment and commitment in updating and improving the existing building, including classrooms, offices, cafeteria, the exterior and more," Cook Daugherty said. "The school excels

Scholarship recipient determined to break the cycle

"ONE DAY YOU'LL GET OUT OF THIS."

Drew Hilgendorf used to repeat this mantra in his head when he was growing up.

He was taken from his abusive father at 8 years old, and bounced around in the foster care system for 13 years.

"My motivation was my ability to look to the future. I focused on that."

From homeless shelters to a graduate program

Hilgendorf, a 2019 MarooNation Kansas City scholarship recipient, always dreamed of "more" throughout his troubled childhood.

He grew up in Kansas City with an abusive father and a mentally ill mother. He spent nights in homeless shelters and on the streets when his mom tried to leave his dad.

"That was kind of the beginning of the 'I want more' mindset I've developed ever since," he said.

With the help of his final foster parents, whom he calls his grandparents, Hilgendorf became the first person in his family to attend college.

"When I was living with my dad, I would get Cs and Ds and fail classes. When I lived with my foster parents, I got As and Bs. They set me straight. They basically pushed me in gear."

He received his bachelor's degree in parks and recreation from the University of Missouri in 2015. After graduation, he decided it wasn't the field for him.

Again chasing "more," Hilgendorf applied to Missouri State to study business administration at the graduate level.

"I wanted to try something new," he said. "I made it clear to myself that wherever I went next, I wanted to reinvent myself."

Grateful to those who helped him study at MSU

Hilgendorf began his master's program in January 2018.

Four days before the start of school, his father passed away.

"I dealt with everything, from dealing with personal items to paying for his funeral, in four days," he said. "I was told to leave it to the state, but I didn't agree with that. He was still my dad. He did awful things to me, but he's still a person."

His caring attitude toward other people flourished at MSU. He immediately became involved with the MBA Association, which feeds his "fix it" approach to life.

"I don't like to have things where they are for very long," he said. "We're in fertile ground with organizations and companies in Springfield. I want to utilize every resource I have to not only help myself with the future job search, but also help somebody else."

Hilgendorf is also a graduate assistant, which helps him have less financial stress. He has high hopes for his future.

"I want to have a spouse and be a good role model to my children," he said. "I want to help people, starting with the family I hope to have. I think I was put here to break the cycle I was born into. I won't let it happen again."

Only one to three percent of children who grow up in foster homes graduate with a four-year degree. Even fewer go on to graduate education.

"It irks me that the statistics are so low."

Hilgendorf knows that all these children need is a chance. He hopes to be an example for people like himself in the future.

"I am grateful for the people who have helped me and invested in me," he said. "Because of you, a former foster kid overcame and is reaching his dreams."

Missouri State partners with U.S. Bank Foundation for Any Given Child

Experiencing a live theater performance.

Feeling the beat as a dance team glides effortlessly in sync.

Visiting museums and examining masterpieces up close.

Listening as a musician commands attention from center stage.

These opportunities can inspire and change a life. But not every family can afford to provide these enrichment activities for their children.

Any Given Child, an initiative by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, began to ensure equity and access to these types of experiences. And Missouri State University joined the local efforts of Any Given Child in 2013, supported by the College of Arts and Letters.

Through this initiative, local leaders in the arts community design, implement and sustain arts education programs for students. In the Springfield area, more than $100,000 is invested in the initiative annually.

These funds allow more than 17,000 kindergarten through 8th grade students in Springfield Public Schools (SPS) to have access to arts enrichment programming at Missouri State and the other Springfield community partners.

For the last three years, the U.S. Bank Foundation has provided funding to the Missouri State University Foundation to support this program. "The Missouri State Foundation seeks partnerships which extend our reach and allow the university to continue providing unique educational opportunities," said Stephanie Matthews, director of corporate and foundation relations.

Prime seating to backstage

The funds cover the travel expenses for all 8th grade students from SPS to attend two performances at the university. For many, this may be their first live production – and it may also be their first visit to a college campus.

After the theater and dance performances, students meet and discuss the performances with the performers. Middle school teachers also receive age-appropriate curriculum to help students reflect on what they have seen and heard.

"Artistic and cultural enrichment and learning through play are focuses of the U.S. Bank Foundation," Matthews said. "With age-appropriate arts experiences, Any Given Child fosters creativity and provides an outlet for youth to create and play, making this program ideal for this partnership."

Recognizing a life well-lived, establishing opportunities for others

Leaving a legacy touches the lives of countless Missouri State University students, faculty and staff.

Alumna continues the legacy of education

For Judy Irwin, giving back to her alma mater, Missouri State University, was a given. Born and raised in Springfield, Irwin received her education – from grade school until graduate school – on the MSU campus.

She completed grades 1-12 at Greenwood Laboratory School, then went on to obtain both a teaching undergraduate degree, and guidance and counseling master's degree from Missouri State. She also finished course work in the specialist program.

DEVOTED TO EDUCATION

Irwin's family always prioritized education. She recalls them talking about "when" she would graduate from college, not "if."

It's no surprise then that she chose a career as an educator and put the degrees she earned at MSU to good use. Irwin spent 35 years working for the Springfield Public School District – 10 years as a teacher and 25 years as a counselor and psychological examiner. Since she began teaching in 1959, her education career has included everything from helping at-risk children to testing and identifying gifted students.

"Everything I learned about being equipped to be a teacher and counselor, I learned at MSU," said Irwin, who received all of her training and completed all of her postgraduate refresher classes at the university.

IMPACTING STUDENTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Her belief in the power of education and love for Missouri State led her to make an estate gift to the university.

The gift includes:

- The Judith Irwin Endowed Scholarship Fund – scholarships for full-time MSU undergraduate or graduate students.
- The Judith Irwin College of Education Fund for Excellence – supports the needs of the college at MSU.
- The Judith Irwin Missouri State University Fund for Excellence – supports the needs of the university.
- A contribution to Bear POWER
   (Promoting Opportunities for Work, Education and Resilience), an inclusive college program at MSU for individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

"This gift enables me to make a difference in the lives of students," Irwin said. "I know what a difference education can make in their lives and I want to help them."

WORDS OF WISDOM

Irwin's fondest memories of her time at Greenwood and MSU are the relationships she formed. Many of her Greenwood classmates, college friends and Alpha Delta Pi sorority sisters turned into lifelong friends.

As such, one of her top pieces of advice to current and future Bears is to remember that people are the most important things in life and relationships stay with you forever.

Other words of wisdom she has to share are be your authentic self; take pride in your uniqueness and abilities, and use them well; be kind to others; and be a force for good.

Walking the walk

Pat Walker's life of service in Missouri started with taking a walk in someone else's shoes in Oklahoma.

She grew up in the 1930s. That era brought the Great Depression and the Dust Bowl to the Midwest. Families like Walker's had little money. Some couldn't afford to buy footwear.

The process went like this: On Sunday mornings, Walker's family would loan their shoes to their neighbors so they could go to Mass. Those people would return the shoes when they got home. Walker and her family put them on and went to church.

"I grew up in a situation where if we didn't pitch in and help each other, we wouldn't survive," Walker said.

A lifetime of service emerged. She served on more than 30 national, state and local boards of directors. And in 2018, the Missouri Public Affairs Academy received a gift from Walker's daughter through the Missouri State University Foundation.

Each summer, the academy brings talented Missouri high school students together to develop their understanding of public affairs.

Thanks to the gift, from now on, you can call the organization the Pat Walker Missouri Public Affairs Academy.

A TOTAL SURPRISE

When Walker visited the academy's 2018 class, she had no idea that the gathering was actually to celebrate her accomplishments and announce the naming gift.

"She thought she was just coming for something else," said Brent Dunn, Foundation executive director, seconds after he made the announcement.

Pat's family, including her daughter, Lee Ann, made the donation as a way to mark her achievements in public service. Pat's contributions to Springfield include establishing Meals on Wheels, starting the city's first hospice and negotiating the transfer of the Ozarks Public Television license to Missouri State.

"Naming the academy after Mom was a perfect fit to honor her during her lifetime," Lee Ann said. "We know it will assure future generations that one good woman can change the world."

Walker said she was overwhelmed but felt so thankful that her name would be attached to an organization that exists to develop future ethical leaders.

"Today's students are so aware and so bright," Pat said. "They're able to use technology and social media to pull communities together and help others.

"I hope that continues. If we're able to plant a seed to help enrich and strengthen our communities, we're going to be fine in this country."

2019 senior class gives the campus a new Bear

Missouri State can never have too many Bear statues.

That's what the class of 2019 believes. Their senior class gift donations went toward designing and installing a new Bear statue on the south lawn of the Plaster Student Union.

"We decided in 2017 to start an ongoing tradition of adding more Bears around campus," said Macy Hankel, 2019 senior class president. "The location of 2019's gift is intentional, because that space is dominated by students, fueled by students and beautiful because of students."

The student winner of a campuswide contest was able to create the look for the new statue.

"We asked a student to design the statue because we wanted to get students even more involved in the building of this tradition," Hankel said.

The design theme is "what student engagement looks like from a student viewpoint."

2019 seniors had the opportunity to donate to the Bear through a crowdfunding site.

They were offered incentives based on the size of their donations. Students who gifted the commemorative amount of $20.19 received an honor cord to wear at graduation.

"The class of 2019 was the first class to fully fund a senior class gift in many years," Hankel said. "It wouldn't have been possible without the generosity we saw throughout the campaign. My whole heart goes out to those who donated."

The class of 2019 statue joins a group of 20 other new Bear sculptures. All of them were expected to be installed in fall semester 2019.

Giving back to their community

The Shaws have passed down a love of education through the generations.

Margaret, better known as Peg, and Roger Shaw always gave back to the Oregon County community.

"The Shaw family's roots are deep in Oregon County as well as in service to others," said Heather Kamps, director of development at MSU-West Plains.

When Roger passed, Margaret and their sons, William W. (Bill) and the late Roger D. (Dusty), wanted to commemorate his legacy. They established the Roger D. Shaw Endowed Scholarship at Missouri State University – West Plains in 1993.

When Margaret passed, their sons honored her the same way. In 2006, the Margaret W. Shaw Endowed Scholarship was created.

Bill Shaw, one of Margaret and Roger's sons, said he comes from a family who wants to help students, especially in Oregon County.

"We have a long history of being interested in education," Shaw said.

Helping others is in their blood. Their ancestors have made contributions to the nation. Shaw's uncle, Russell M. Wilder, was emeritus professor of medicine in the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine; a master of the American College of Physicians; and a renowned specialist in nutrition and metabolic diseases.

Shaw's grandfather was head of the department of Ophthalmology at Rush Medical College in Chicago, and later led the Ophthalmology department at the University of Chicago. He was one of the founding members of the American Board of Ophthalmology, Inc., the first American board to certify medical specialists.

So naturally, giving back feels natural.

"These scholarships are one of the things we can do to help people directly in the county," Shaw said

ABOUT THE ROGER D. SHAW ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP

Each year, six students are awarded $1,000.

The scholarship goes to students who are forestry or agriculture majors from Oregon County. Students must submit two letters of recommendation from previous instructors, have a GPA of 2.5 and show financial need.

ABOUT THE MARGARET W. SHAW ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP

Each year, four students are awarded $1,200.

The scholarship is for students in Oregon County who show financial need.

Impact on the community

Since 1993, MSU-West Plains has given the Roger D. Shaw Endowed Scholarship to about 75 students. MSU-West Plains has given the Margaret W. Shaw Endowed Scholarship to about 32 students.

"Scholarships, such as those established by the Shaws, have a lifelong impact on students at Missouri State University-West Plains," said Kamps. "Living in one of the poorest Congressional districts in the United States, many of our students would not be able to continue their education post high school without the outpouring of generosity of others."
