Wedding Venue Spotlight

VIP COUNTRY CLUB

A day to remember,

VIP COUNTRY CLUB

VIP Country Club has long been considered one of Westchester's "Best Kept Secrets", as brides and grooms from far and wide flocked to the New Rochelle country club and event venue for its top-notch service and picturesque views of the Long Island Sound. In early 2018, VIP unveiled its floor to ceiling renovations, that updated both the interior and exterior of the popular wedding destination while introducing new and improved amenities and event facility options. The most exciting of these being the new 600 Lounge, VIP's sleek and modern space that is available for wedding receptions, cocktail hours, after parties and more.

With two separate bars for easy access, 4 televisions to display a photo montage if so desired, a professional DJ booth, LED lighting throughout and capacity for up to 200 guests, 600 provides today's creative bride with unlimited options when creating an out of the box wedding experience on every level. The 600 Lounge continues to wow and impress as it brings the vibe and sophistication of an upscale New York City lounge to Westchester County.

VIP's exquisite ballrooms do little to disappoint as well as they seamlessly transition into a multitude of wedding day options from ceremony, cocktail hour and reception with relative ease, allowing for a one stop nuptials destination venue. This coupled with VIP's amazing outside event areas and everything that the country club has to offer, means that no wedding is ever an ordinary affair.

Wedding Day Dreams Come True at GlenArbor Golf Club

GlenArbor Golf Club in Bedford Hills, New York, is situated on the grounds of what was one of the largest, historic estates in Westchester County. Preserving the property's historic roots and heritage is clearly shown in the beautiful clubhouse that was designed to emulate the old mansions of the region, offering a glimpse into a gracious bygone age.

The beauty of GlenArbor Golf Club begins from the tree-lined drive to the entrance where graceful columns frame the entryway. Upon entering the foyer your eye travels directly across to the floor-to-ceiling French doors leading to the wide sweep of slate terrace which features an outdoor wood burning stone fireplace and overlooks the sparkling natural spring fed lake. This view makes the perfect location for photos, the wedding ceremony and cocktail hour. The simply appointed dining room, which can host up to 125 guests, provides a gracious setting for the reception dinner. The celebration continues on the terrace under the modern bistro lights for cocktails and dancing. Events over 125 guests can be hosted in a magnificent sailcloth tent erected on the lawn adjacent to the clubhouse and within easy reach of the terrace, bar, and other indoor spaces.

The Bridal Dressing Room offers a private space for pampering and preparation for the bride and her bridal party. The lounge's balcony has breathtaking views for those special "getting ready" photos.

Never more than one wedding at a time, and with a team of the best event professionals, GlenArbor Golf Club is the perfect choice for the discerning couple who are searching for a venue that offers the privacy and exclusivity that this important day deserves.

Sizing Down

I'll admit it: I was one of those annoying brides who collected eye-rolls before the big day. In the months leading up to my wedding, in 2018, I lost a surprising amount of weight from stress alone. "Without even trying!" (I know, eye-roll.)

But the point is, the physical toll of wedding-planning stress was very real for me, as it is for so many brides, and nothing kept me up at night more than the things that were out of my hands: the weather, if friends and family members would execute the duties outlined in my meticulous spreadsheet (another eye-roll), shipping issues with my bridesmaids' Rent the Runway dress orders.

Throw a global pandemic into that mix, and I would have been a twig. In the past year, couples have had to make hard, practically impossible decisions based on circumstances beyond their control. Many decided to postpone, teeing up 2021 to be one of the biggest years for weddings yet. (My husband and I already have three invites on the calendar.)

Some, however, decided to push through and adapted their nuptials to suit state guidelines. We highlighted six couples who did just that in "Pivoting Plans" (page 38). Their celebrations ranged from last-minute elopements and intimate, backyard affairs to firework-fueled bashes held at traditional venues, albeit with a reduced guest list.

As we head into another uncertain year, let their flexibility and creativity be a guide to how you can build your dream day no matter the circumstances. Every bride we featured said that their wedding exceeded expectations, and that's no surprise, since downsized affairs can equal less stress and more room in the budget for really special extras, like a six-course meal or personalized table arrangements.

That's why the industry experts interviewed in "Small Wonders" (page 46) expect the micro-weddings trend to extend far beyond 2021. In Westchester and the Hudson Valley, venues, planners, and vendors have adapted to offer an array of options, from creative outdoor setups (see "En Plein Air" on page 72) to comprehensive packages in a range of budgets. No matter what 2021 brings, they're ready, and you will be, too!

PIVOTING PLANS

From spur-of-the-moment ceremonies to firework-fueled fetes, these small weddings were big on style.

BY KELSEY MULVEY

As the saying goes, big things come in small packages. While many couples postponed their nuptials in light of the pandemic, others reimagined their dream day into a micro-wedding to adhere to New York's safety guidelines. But just because weddings were smaller in 2020 doesn't mean they were any less special. Here, six couples share how they executed their grand ideas with a smaller guest list.

ALEXA PERSICO & FRANK CIPOLLA

RYE

As a makeup artist with an eponymous cosmetics line, Alexa Persico has a knack for finding the beauty in life's biggest (and smallest) moments. Despite shifting gears due to the pandemic — she pushed back the wedding two months and traded in a 10-piece band for DJ/singer Josh Greyson from Hank Lane — her wedding to Frank Cipolla was a fete to remember.

The festivities took place over Labor Day weekend at the Westchester Country Club in Rye. At sunset, Alexa and Frank stood in front of 50 guests and swapped vows at the club's outdoor theater.

"It was pretty much all close family, which made the day even more special," Persico explains.

Cocktail hour began promptly after the ceremony, followed by the reception. Brooklyn's Konstantinos Floral Design transformed the venue into a botanical paradise, complete with lush, white, flower arrangements descending from the ceiling. While dancing was limited in order to promote the safety of their guests, the bride and groom were able to have their first dance and share a special moment with their parents.

Despite the restrictions, Persico wouldn't change a thing. "The entire day was so relaxed; it truly was everything I ever wanted, and it felt like that day was meant to be," she shares.

Rounding out the festivities was a surprise fireworks show that Cipolla arranged for Persico. "It was the perfect ending to a perfect day," the bride says.

JENNIFER D'AMBROSIO & RANDY SHULL

KATONAH

Jennifer D'Ambrosio and Randy Shull kept the celebratory spirit alive all weekend long at Emerald's Farm in Katonah. The couple checked into the farmhouse on Friday night and woke up bright and early to transform the spacious backyard into an idyllic venue. Colorful arrangements from Armonk's Joseph Richard Florals brightened up the space, while a party tent, linens, and rustic wooden arch from Party Line Rentals in Elmsford complemented the farmhouse's rustic aesthetic.

Since Emerald's Farm was the site of the ceremony, reception, and lodging, the festivities had a relaxed feel. Once Shull's dad, who is a minister, married the happy couple, the intimate crowd enjoyed a long, laid-back reception.

"We had the place for the entire weekend, so there was no specific end time, which was nice," D'Ambrosio says.

The couple started planning their nuptials long before the pandemic hit New York. Fortunately, the couple didn't have to stray too far away from their original plans: The only big difference was the guest list. While the bride and groom initially invited 70 people, they whittled their list down to 21 and streamed the ceremony for the rest of their guests on Zoom.

"Life is too short, so we decided to move forward," D'Ambrosio says. "We wish we could have had the rest of our family and friends with us in person, but it was still beautiful."

CAITLIN & JAMES DUGGAN

ARDSLEY

Caitlin Duggan and husband, James, always wanted to get married on the 10th anniversary of their relationship, June 16, 2020. However, the couple decided to hold off on throwing a big party until she received her master's degree the following year. Though they didn't have a set plan, Caitlin slowly started putting the pieces together — and picked up her wedding dress a few weeks before New York issued its shelter-in-place order.

"I spent the months of March, April, and May looking at [the dress] every time I opened my closet, wondering if I would get a chance to wear it," she shares.

Caitlin's husband underwent surgery in early June, but a streak of good luck put their wedding plans back on track. "On June 12, my husband was in dramatically better shape, and we had picked up a marriage license right before his surgery from the City of Yonkers. I turned to him on the couch and said, 'Should we get married on Tuesday?' I then got to work on planning the entire wedding in 48 hours."

The couple got married at their reverend's home and restricted the guest list to photographer Riley McCarthy and Caitlin's sister as their witness. After taking photos at Hart Brook's Nature Preserve, the happy couple hosted a 10-person outdoor lunch at L'inizio in Ardsley.

"This was not the June wedding we had planned for, but it was a beautiful, intimate celebration we will never forget," she says.

MICHELLE & ROBERT DIROMA JR.

GREENWICH

Michelle and Robert DiRoma Jr. initially planned a traditional, 100-person wedding at Vittoria'Z on the Lake in Jefferson Valley. Although she was tempted to postpone her nuptials in light of the pandemic, Michelle warmed up to having a micro-wedding three weeks before the original date. As the couple shifted their plans to adhere to the state's safety guidelines — and cut their guest list in half — they leaned on their community to create a special day. Friends and family members took on different jobs to make sure the celebration ran as smoothly as possible: A florist friend spearheaded decorations, Michelle's cousin baked a wedding cake and cookies, and her bridal party doubled as the glam squad. Michelle even drove down to DC to pick up her best friend who got ordained for the occasion.

"I was really able to make the ceremony reflect us personally, since we worked on it together," Michelle says.

Set at a friend's property in Greenwich, the day was a perfect representation of the couple. The ceremony began with a meditation moment, her late mother's wind chime singing in the background. As guests dined on an eclectic mix of Italian and Peruvian food, Robert's best man performed a song he wrote with his daughter. The night ended with a sparkler send-off and bonfire, complete with an acoustic performance from a friend.

"This day we planned in the backyard seemed perfect, and I never would have pictured my perfect wedding to happen in a backyard," Michelle says. "No pressure, no stress, simply perfect."

MAUREEN CANNON & KEVIN TRUE

SLOATSBURG

Shortly after New York's shelter-in-place order went into effect, Maureen Cannon and Kevin True pushed back their May 9 nuptials to October 30. However, as the state began to introduce a reopening plan, the couple decided to switch gears again and have a summer wedding. Planning a wedding in three weeks' time sounds like a tall order, but New York City–based event planner Tzo Ai Ang worked hard to ensure the new wedding stayed true to the couple's vision.

"Tzo Ai reached out to all our vendors to see if they were available but, more importantly, that they felt safe and comfortable," Cannon says.

While Maureen and Kevin had to change their venue and several vendors, the wedding stuck close to their original plans. The festivities began with a ceremony at St. Elizabeth's Church in Wyckoff, NJ, led by a family friend. From there, the couple's 40 guests headed to Valley Rock Inn in Sloatsburg for an intimate reception. The venue was in full bloom, thanks to arrangements from Poppies & Posies in New York City and a flower-adorned cake from Brooklyn studio Nine Cakes.

For the bride, it was those small, intimate moments that made the day extra special. "We drove ourselves from the church to the reception," she shares. "Not what I would have pictured, but I loved it. It was relaxed; we listened to our music and could really just be ourselves rather than get chauffeured."

She also had a similar moment with her dad, who drove her to the ceremony. "It was so special and to hear him say how happy he was that I was marrying Kevin — even though I knew it already," she adds.

SARAH & NICO THEOFANIDIS

PELHAM

For Sarah and Nico Theofanidis, family was at the heart of their special day. Though the couple was scheduled to wed at Blue Hill at Stone Barns, they shifted gears and held an outdoor ceremony at Sarah's family home in Pelham. An intimate party of 12, the festivities kicked off with a short cocktail hour, where guests could enjoy childhood photos of the couple.

Once the drinks were poured, guests were asked to migrate to the backyard and take a seat for the ceremony. Poppies & Posies, a New York City–based floral company, created an altar with an array of full, colorful bouquets. Nico's brother, Lambros, officiated the wedding, while each of the couple's sisters recited a reading for the occasion. After, the newlyweds and their guests enjoyed an intimate dinner alfresco, complete with verdant linens and etched glassware from Party Rentals, Ltd.

However, the party didn't really start until after dinner, when Nico serenaded Sarah with a rendition of "Some Enchanted Evening" from South Pacific. The festivities ended with a family-wide dance party, which was a clear highlight of the night.

"We had so much fun on the 'dance floor,' which was my parents' living room," Sarah says. Nico agrees: "I loved dancing together as a family."

Small Wonders

The micro-wedding movement proves pared-down nuptials can still have a big impact.

by Ann Loynd Burton

Before COVID-19 changed everyone's plans, the wedding industry kept getting bigger. "With Pinterest and blogs pushing over-the-top, expensive inspiration, people wanted to do large weddings with giant installations," explains Sierra Steifman, president and creative director of Poppies & Posies floral and event design in New York City. "While that was fun for a while, there's something exciting about bringing it down a level and doing things on a smaller scale."

Enter micro weddings. Typically considered a celebration of about 30 guests or fewer, these pared-down nuptials invite smaller crowds without skimping on the details. The concept has been growing in popularity in recent years, and in 2020 they became a necessity.

Sarah Carroll, owner of Small Shindigs in Armonk, says smaller weddings allow for ornate table settings (right). The Art of Eating blogger, food photographer, and caterer Matthew Mancuso prefers an artisinal dinner (far right).

> "A big reason intimate weddings are so great is that your money goes further."
> —Sarah Carroll
> owner of Small Shindigs

"I've been planning micro weddings on and off for a few years, and having state mandates only enhanced it more," offers Nanuet planner Jacqueline Vazquez of Lifetime Events by Jacqueline. Vazquez says micro weddings are larger than elopements (which consist of only the couple and one or two close friends or family members) but smaller than a traditional wedding.

Still, she says, slashing the guest list doesn't mean a bare-bones budget. Instead, couples can go big on the details they value most. "Maybe they want a famous musician or a jazz band. Maybe it's a different location for the dinner reception — like a rooftop with really high-quality food."

Sarah Carroll, owner of Small Shindigs, in Armonk, seconds that notion. "It's a common misconception that smaller weddings are for the budget bride," she confirms. "A big reason intimate weddings are so great is that your money goes farther. You can opt for upgrades that might not be feasible with a larger celebration, like a beautiful tasting menu or special china."

The table is one place where small celebrations can go big with Pinterest-worthy decor. "When you don't need as many place settings, it's easier to better reflect your tastes," Carroll adds. And, of course, that includes the centerpieces. Karen Gómez of Bow and Rose Floral Studio, in Port Chester, has been fielding a lot of requests from couples who have decided to downsize. "For example, if you have a wedding of 250 guests, I'd suggest six low and six tall centerpieces. With a micro wedding of 30 to 50 guests, that same budget can create much fuller tables," she says. "The tables that are there become focal points, and it really elevates the experience."

The same thing goes for the food. Instead of your typical chicken-or-fish offering, couples can offer guests more personalized options. "It is so much easier to accommodate dietary needs and preferences than with a large wedding," offers Garrison-based personal chef and The Art of Eating blogger Matthew Mancuso. "For 18 people, send them an email. Ask what they want."

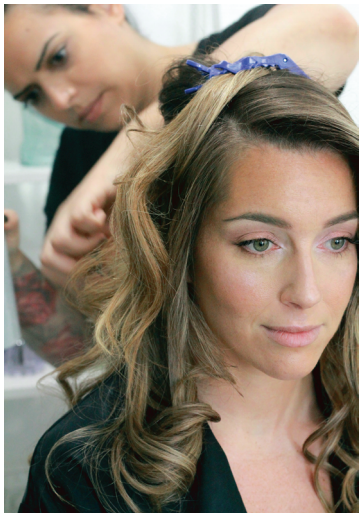

Not only is food better-executed on a smaller scale, couples can make dinner the entertainment. "For those who choose to forgo the DJ and dance floor, the main event is the food. Want to do a raw bar for the cocktail hour, when we're shucking oysters as guests arrive? We can do that," Mancuso adds. He has teamed up with wedding planner Rachael Solomon of Bad Boss Bride, in Suffern, to offer couples a comprehensive package for their petite affairs that really takes the pressure off of planning. "Normally, when I work with couples planning weddings, they're happy, but they're nervous," he adds. "These couples are so happy with a lot less pressure."

Mancuso and Solomon aren't the only industry professionals teaming up to deliver micro weddings in the Hudson Valley. Bow and Rose's Gómez has joined forces with Kara Delfino of

Port Chester's Beauty Alchemy to offer a comprehensive package. "Micro weddings allow vendors to become closer," Gómez adds. "If Kara has a client who is looking for a flower crown, the design becomes more intentional. I'm able to ask her more specific questions, so it's personal and unique, with flowers from the bride's mother's garden, for example."

The two are constantly collaborating on mood boards that take both beauty and flowers into consideration. "Those details often get forgotten when the wedding is so big," she says. Sara Danish, owner of Larchmont's Sugar and Salt Studio catering, also works with clients on a case-by-case basis to create a complete package. "We have a coordination component to the business, to help source and set up most of their needs, and we try and be a one-stop shop, by being the liaison between clients and our trusted vendors," she explains.

Venues are getting on the micro train, as well, working with planners and other vendors to create an all-in-one experience. Steifman, for example, is collaborating with Blue Hill at Stone Barns in Pocantico Hills to deliver a case package. Similarly, Vazquez is seeing venues become more creative with their outdoor offerings, shifting overflow parking to niche gardens or creating social-distancing setups. The Ritz-Carlton in Westchester, for example, is undergoing a multimillion-dollar renovation to include a new micro-wedding venue called Kanopi. The space is perched atop the tallest building between New York City and Boston and boasts panoramic views. The Ritz will reopen as an Autograph Collection Hotel in early 2021.

Mancuso and Solomon, too, are helping couples get creative with locations, like the Edward Hopper House in Nyack. No kitchen? No problem. Mancuso can cook outside on a firepit and get resourceful with induction burners. "In the Edward Hopper House, the walls are decorated with all of Hopper's original artwork," he explains. "We're putting a table in the middle and feeding 12 people a six-course dinner."

That kind of intimate, unique experience is what micro weddings are all about. And most importantly, the true meaning of the day doesn't get lost in the shuffle. "The number-one reason micro weddings are so special to me is that you really get to focus on the marriage piece," Small Shindigs' Carroll offers. "Something that really attracted me to working with clients who are having smaller weddings is that they really value the ceremony. It becomes more about having that special time with friends and family, as opposed to making sure 200 guests are having fun." WW

Alchemy Beauty (above) works with Bow and Rose to coordinate the wedding-day mood. Kanopi (below) is the new micro-reception venue at Autograph Collection in Westchester.

THE GIST: Secluded on a peninsula away from downtown Newport, this year-round resort has a prime oceanfront location with two private beaches.

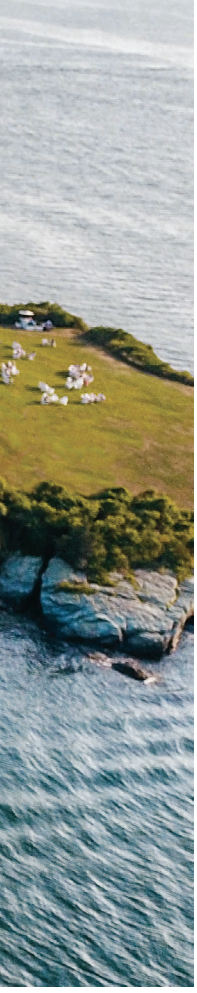

SLEEP: Rooms and suites fall into three categories: "On the Hill," "By the Beach," or "Overlooking the Harbor." The Private Beach Cottages take full advantage of Castle Hill's location, with semi-private decks overlooking the sand dunes, New England-chic wicker furniture, and, often, fireplaces. For the best views, book the bi-level Turret Suite on the third floor of the Agassiz Mansion, with 320-degree panoramas of Narragansett Bay, the Atlantic Ocean, and Castle Hill Lighthouse.

DO: From Gilded Age mansions and Cliff Walk to the grass courts at the International Tennis Hall of Fame and the annual Newport Jazz Festival, there's plenty to do in this tony Rhode Island town. But, part of the pleasure of Castle Hill Inn is escaping the hustle-and-bustle to sunbathe and swim in the calm waters at sandy Castle Hill Beach. Also worth indulging in is the hotel's dining. The formal, wood-paneled Dining Room is considered one of Newport's top spots for a special-occasion meal, while the more casual Lawn is the place to kick back with a craft cocktail, lobster roll, and quintessential coastal New England view.

YOU'LL LOVE: The smaller, more secluded of Castle Hill Inn's two beaches, pebbly Grace Kelly Beach is where the soon-to-be princess (and bridal-fashion icon) sunned between takes of High Society in 1956.

THE GIST: Yes, it's a major splurge, but this luxe, adults-only, all-inclusive property on Sinclair Lewis' former farm-estate consistently ranks among the world's most romantic hotels for a reason.

SLEEP: There are a handful of tastefully appointed rooms, but most guests opt to stay in the exquisite private cottages, which have won't-want-to-go-outside features, like extra-deep stone hot tubs, wood-burning fireplaces, cast-iron-and-copper soaking tubs, and picture windows looking out on the verdant Vermont countryside. Two of the most romantic are Aviary, with walls of windows and a natural-stone hot tub nestled next to the fireplace, and the 3,000 sq. ft. Chalet, with two fireplaces and exposed birch beams.

DO: Fall into the rhythm of a stay at Twin Farms. Hike, bike, or ski on private trails (and have the concierge leave a lobster picnic for you); play croquet on the lawn or billiards at the pub; relax with a hand-carved Stave jigsaw puzzle; or hole up in your cottage with Netflix, truffle popcorn, freshly baked cookies, and a bottle of Champagne. Whatever you choose, don't miss dinner: The daily tasting menus are a highlight of any stay, featuring pairings chosen from the 15,000-bottle wine cellar.

Into the WOODS

High school sweethearts host an intimate, cozy, winter wedding at a pastoral bed-and-breakfast where they once worked together.

BY JENN ANDRLIK

Julia & Aaron

NOVEMBER 9, 2019
THE COTTAGE IN THE PINES
SPARROW BUSH, NY

As high school sweethearts, Julia and Aaron Kormanik had lived and worked together at the bucolic Sparrow Bush bed-and-breakfast, The Cottage in the Pines. When they got engaged there, eight years later, it only made sense to return to that special place for their fall wedding.

"We got engaged on a bridge overlooking a pond and forest," the bride remembers. "That ended up being the same place we did our first look on our wedding day."

The couple envisioned a mix of woodland and bohemian romance, which planner Erin Crosby of Brooklyn's Pickles and Pies ran with. Julia wanted everything to feel hygge (a Scandinavian term used to describe a moment or feeling that is cozy, special, or charming). "We hoped everyone would feel comfortable and welcome at our wedding in the woods," Julia offers. "We got married on a really cold November day, in front of a large fireplace. We had baskets of blankets, hot chocolate, cider, a s'mores station, lots of candles, and fluffy pampas plumes for flowers."

First Look

The couple shared their first look on the same scenic bridge where they were engaged. Then, the bride and groom went into the woods, joined by their 14-person bridal party, for a magical, colorful, smoke photo op planned by Crosby. "I told her I had an 'allergy' to bold colors, and the winter landscape would make the wedding bland, so she came up with this to bring some fun color to our photos," Julia adds.

She wore a personalized denim jacket adorned with her new, married name over her wedding dress, found on Pinterest from Wear Your Love. The bridal party wore a mix of gray dresses from GCGme and Lulus, while the groom and groomsmen wore navy tuxedos from The Black Tux.

The Ceremony

The groom, Aaron, dabbles in carpentry, so he built the ceremony arch with the help of a friend (on the day of the wedding, the bride notes). Crosby added pampas grass, a rug runner, and lush fall florals to the already rustic and verdant setting.

For the ceremony itself, the couple's friend was ordained to marry them in a secular service. "She wrote a really beautiful ceremony, which captured our love and relationship perfectly," Julia says. "We wrote our own vows and kept the whole thing really short and sweet."

The Food

For the couple, excellent food was a priority, so they devoted the most time to researching a caterer. Ultimately, they enlisted Hand Crafted Catering and Events in New Rochelle to serve a family-style dinner with large platters of roasted chicken, sirloin steak with salsa verde sauce, crispy potatoes, garlic confit, and rosemary dressing with seasonal roasted vegetables. "Everything was locally sourced," the bride says, adding, "but the hit of the night was definitely the homemade apple cider donuts with dipping sauces and our late-night ramen station with to-go containers."

The Accents

The reception stayed true to the woodland and bohemian romance vibe, with mismatched vintage china from Crosby's inventory; copper candelabras; tall, gray candles; and moss that the planner locally foraged herself for the tables.

Each guest received a ceramic campfire mug with a wedding logo designed by a close friend. "They went well with our woodsy theme and doubled for use of our hot chocolate/cider station," Julia says.

"I wanted to encourage guests to hang outside and enjoy the woods and scenery during cocktail hour," she adds. "The hot chocolate and cider — spiked at the bar, of course — helped make the cold a little more bearable!"

A photo booth was a must-have for the couple, so they opted for the traveling Wanderbus, based in Slate Hill. "I had seen Wanderbus featured by a local photographer," says Julia. "It's super cute, went with the vintage theme, and was a really fun bonus for our guests."

Linden & Jacob

JUNE 9, 2019
POCANTICO HILLS
NEW YORK

NATURAL Beauty

For an unassuming affair, one couple relied on the picturesque Blue Hill at Stone Barns to set the scene.

BY ANN LOYND BURTON

When Linden Hill and Jacob Gallice met through mutual friends and began dating in 2018, they probably wouldn't have imagined their wedding would take place in the Hudson Valley. The next year, the then-Brooklynites considered something more metropolitan for their June nuptials but ultimately decided they wanted a venue with an outdoor component.

The couple also needed a site that wasn't too fussy or over-the-top. "Neither Jacob nor I like to be the center of attention," the bride explains. "We knew we wanted something more intimate, without some of the pomp and circumstance you'd see at a typical wedding."

Hill's cousin, who lived in Westchester, suggested they check out Blue Hill at Stone Barns in Pocantico Hills. "It was the first time we could imagine our wedding someplace," she says. "Every person we met on that first visit was so kind and willing to talk to us; it was a great feeling."

The Vibe

The guest list was limited to around 100 people, to keep the feeling low-key and intimate. Hill and Gallice decided to forgo the formal wedding party, instead opting to assign special roles for friends and siblings. "There's some extra pressure to be in a bridal party, and we didn't want to add to that," Hill notes. "Our friends were still there with us to get ready that day."

The bride applied the same approach to the decor. "I wasn't someone with a vision and a big Pinterest board," she admits. "Instead, we wanted to play off of the beauty that was already at Blue Hill. The florals were important to me."

Hill and Gallice enlisted Sierra Steifman of the NYC-based Poppies & Posies to create a natural look that wouldn't compete with the scene. The couple originally planned on getting married in front of a large tree in the courtyard, and Hill didn't want a large floral arch to take over. Instead, Steifman created an organic installation that would come up from the ground.

When the forecast called for rain, Blue Hill's staff suggested moving the ceremony under a large awning to stay outdoors while offering protection from the elements. "It was so cozy under there, and the floral installation was able to pop."

The Ceremony

"Unexpectedly, the ceremony was the best part," Hill remembers, noting that it was both her and Gallice's favorite moment. "It was so wonderful for Linden and me to share our vows and love for each other while being surrounded by all of our friends and family," the groom adds. "I knew right away that it was one of life's special moments that I will always cherish and remember."

Hill's best friend acted as the officiant, and the couple gave her free rein. "It was so beautiful to hear what she said, and we wrote our own vows," the bride remembers. "It was incredible to hear what Jacob had to say and be in that cozy atmosphere. It was something I'll never forget, for sure."

The Reception

Moving indoors for the reception, Steifman was able to repurpose the ceremony flowers throughout the silo lobby, hayloft lounge, and hallway leading into dinner. "She created romantic little moments everywhere," adds New York City-based planner Tzo Ai Ang. Guests enjoyed passed hors d'oeuvres of garden vegetables and pea burgers, as well as a Gardener's Gimlet signature cocktail, with gin, peas, mint, and lemon.

"Ever since Jacob and I started dating, we always said we were two peas in a pod," the bride offers. "We wanted to incorporate that in a subtle, non-cheesy way, which mostly came through in the paperie, and for our wedding day, we caught the end of pea season at Blue Hill."

In the hayloft, Hill wanted to create a layered, eclectic look instead of perfectly matching tables. "For an intimate wedding in the hayloft, we were able to do all long tables," Ang adds. "They were adorned with a collection of glass cloches, ceramic dishes with flower frogs, ivory taper candles, and mixed votive candles."

After dining on a five-course meal prepared by Chef Dan Barber, the newlyweds and their guests danced the night away to the sounds of Cafe Wha? out of New York's Greenwich Village. "Jacob and I are big dancers, and we loved being on the dance floor with everyone," the bride says. "They played all of our favorites."

Money MATTERS

Industry experts weigh in on where couples can save in their wedding-day budgets and what elements are worth the splurge.

SPLURGE

"Memories are forever, so what better way to keep those memories alive than with images and videos you can go back to at any given time? If you don't have a large budget, ask your photographer/videographer for options – whether it's hiring them for less hours or selecting a package that does not have all of the bells and whistles."

"Inner envelopes are rarely used anymore. It's considered old school, and not including them is an easy expense to cut because your recipients will most likely not be expecting to see one."

SPLURGE

"Use unique materials that act as table décor and place cards. Have names printed in the same font as the invitation, in a color that complements the entire tablescape, to create that seamless flow."

—MELISSA GROUNDS, Mod Creative Design, Larchmont

"If you want an arch, but the cost is beyond what you expected, consider what resources you or your family may have. One father of the bride, who was a builder, created a wood arch for the ceremony, and on the day of the wedding the florist decorated it."

"Wedding-gown preservation may seem like a splurge, but your dress was the splurge. We'll clean the gown, and then it's preserved in a museum-quality preservation chest. "Negotiate a delayed deposit schedule. Your caterer, florist, band, etc., don't need your money six months prior to the wedding. They are not paying for anything associated with your wedding that far out. This way, you have some protection, in that you are laying out less money early on."

"The splurge is always your venue, food, and cocktails! This is the stage upon which the entire event is set. It should reflect your sense of style but not be too trendy. In the years to come, when looking back at your treasured wedding photos, they should look timeless. Also be sure there is a view of some kind! The beauty of nature enhances the guest experience and always makes for wonderful photo ops."

To make guests feel as safe as possible, many brides are turning to outdoor nuptials. Luckily, the Hudson Valley is home to an array of al fresco venues that take advantage of stunning vistas and picturesque, historic architecture.

UNTERMYER
Park and Gardens

YONKERS

Transporting might be the word that best characterizes an exchange of vows at Untermyer Park and Gardens, a celestial, gorgeous site that levitates high above the Hudson River with a history of splendor and decline — and splendor again — that mirrors that of the city of Yonkers, where it resides.

The compound, now comprising 43 acres, was plotted at the turn of the 20th century as the private gardens of Samuel Untermyer, a lawyer and investor known nearly as much for his horticultural knowledge as he was for being the first lawyer in the States to earn $1 million on a single case.

Untermyer's Beaux Arts architect and landscape designer William Welles Bosworth's grounds offer an array of settings sure to titillate. There is the dramatic descent to the river's bank that unfurls like a ribbon of stairs, modeled on Villa d'Este on Italy's Lake Como. Terminating in a pair of Roman columns chiseled from cipollino marble obtained from architect Stanford White, the staircase affords an expansive view of the Palisades. The Temple of Love, a fantastical and aptly named folly featuring a round-topped gazebo atop a cascade of rocks, hollowed out to serve as planters, presents bridal parties with a must-have backdrop. And then there is the Walled Garden, a sacred-seeming sanctuary modeled on the Indo-Persian gardens of antiquity where visual symmetry delivers a drama evoking paradise on earth. Canals and reflecting pools are decorated with lotus and water lilies, irises, pickerelweed, and the grassy-white star rush. The drop-dead feature of the space may be the amphitheater, which is guarded by a pair of winged sphinxes, sculptural flourishes atop a pair of towering Ionic columns.

The Davenport
Mansion on the Sound
NEW ROCHELLE
davenportmansion.com

Guy Demeo is the one and only guy to know at The Davenport Mansion on the Sound, a 19th-century home situated on New Rochelle's Davenport Neck overlooking Long Island Sound, an area settled by wealthy Manhattanites seeking a spot for their summer cottages. His company, Unique Affairs Catering, hosts weddings from this salty, beachfront perch with its balustraded veranda and dramatic port-cochere. The venue has become known for its one-wedding-a-day policy, which gives the first day of matrimony the dawn-to-dusk significance it deserves.

The estate, which is centered by the original manse, now painted a sparkling white, hosts outdoor micro-weddings, for 50 or fewer, on the lawn or the terrace set, with a horseshoe of chairs and an arbor garlanded in flowers. Adventurous duos can proceed down an aisle barefoot on the beach and then pose for photos at the water's edge or in front of a tumble of moss-covered rocks.

The pleasing scenery vouches for the popularity of the terrain among architects and landscape architects like Stanford White and Frederick Law Olmsted, who were commissioned for projects that remain today.

For his gracious hospitality, adapted on the fly for unprecedented times, Demeo is praised by brides and grooms alike who gush in online forums about the debt they owe him for both alleviating their stress at a difficult moment and for making their wedding day so special and memorable. It's no wonder his enterprise has won numerous awards in the wedding world.

Valley Rock
Inn & Mountain Club

Who needs a wedding planner when the meticulously conceived Valley Rock Inn & Mountain Club is the destination? The latest labor of love of Michael Bruno, the serial entrepreneur who gave antiques life on the Internet with 1stdibs.com, the Sloatsburg resort is a one-stop venue likely to inspire the happy duo and their guests to linger.

Bruno acquired a set of buildings and land parcels built in the early 20th century in the quiet hamlet of Sloatsburg. Hidden behind the storefronts of the main drag, Valley Rock respects the quiet of its host village with a refined style that maximizes its programmatic capacity while complementing the area's humble scale.

The resort is divided into discrete, manicured vignettes, each with its own theme: A shade garden is planted with slender maple trees trimmed to a level of leafiness that permits conversation as servers circulate with cocktails; an open-topped outdoor dining room, enclosed in rustic walls, can be set just as easily with four-tops as it can with long trestle tables of 12 or more. Another casual outdoor restaurant features tables under a corrugated portico rests on the trunks of cedar trees, stripped and glossed, that dissolve gracefully into a bed of gravel. The main lawn is studded with hanging firepits, suspended from tripods that recall the campfires of Colonial times.

On-site lodging is available for 34 guests, all but one of whom can enjoy their own bathroom, thanks to a row of clapboard farmhouses, renovated and appointed with simple yet tasteful décor that is Bruno's signature. There in an intimate garden, where many a ceremony has taken place. There is a pool on the property, and just 10 minutes away, guests can enjoy an assortment of recreational pursuits, including hiking and biking at Harriman State Park and Sterling Forest.

GLYNWOOD
Center for Regional Food and Farming

COLD SPRING

glynwoodevents.org

Conservation and a stewardship of the land are the principles that govern the Glynwood Center for Regional Food and Farming, which is open to the wedding ceremonies of future husbands and wives who are likely in pursuit of the same ideals. Located on the perimeter of Cold Spring, the 225-acre farm was established by financier George Perkins and his family in 1929. Ever since, it has followed in the preservation tradition of his father, George Walbridge Perkins, who was integral to the establishment and management of the Palisades Interstate Parkway Commission.

An advocate of local food production and an educator on the regional agriculture circuit, Glynwood practices regenerative farming and is intent on sharing the beauty of its property on special occasions. Among the places for one's eye to rest are the hydrangea-lined lawn under the shade of trees, a rustic boathouse, and a fieldstone house festooned in wisteria. The house — known as the Perkins House and equipped for 22 guests — is one of three options for lodging that includes the Appledore Cottage (eight guests), and the Farmhouse, which dates to the 1700s and accommodates 12.

Newlyweds and their guests are treated to amenities such as grazing livestock in pastures, expansive plots of lettuce, cabbage, spinach, beets, radishes, and bok choy among many other vegetables and fruits. Swimming in the lake is permitted if a hired lifeguard is present and catering and tents must be obtained from outside vendors and farm-style breakfast is prepared to overnight guests.

Stone Tavern Farm

stonetavernfarm.com

Two and a half hours north of White Plains sits the hamlet of Roxbury, birthplace of railroad financier Jay Gould and home to fewer than 3,000 people as of 2018. Listed on both the National and State Registers of Historic Places, Roxbury's sparse population spells tranquility for pairs seeking a pastoral setting with rustic enhancements like those that abound at Stone Tavern Farm.

Established in 1803 and now encompassing 250 rolling acres in the Catskill Mountains, Stone Tavern Farm accommodates weddings both intimate (80 guests) and sizable (250 guests). Ceremonies take place atop a hill with panoramic vistas — wild meadows, stately maples — or at the Waterside Pavilion, where a glassy pond adds a shimmer to sunset cocktails and rehearsal dinners. A 12,000 sq. ft. event barn constructed of hemlock wood has a capacity of 400 when social distancing is not in vogue.

The property is crisscrossed with old roads, stone walls, and remnants of original structures including a historic toll booth. Located on property, the six-bedroom Stone Tavern House, once an inn to travelers from the other side of the mountain — and now thought to be the oldest house in town — is popular among brides and their entourages. Other guests can stay nearby at a variety of homes associated with Stone Tavern.

On-property amenities include canoeing and kayaking, volleyball, lawn games, and visiting with resident farm animals including horses, sheep, dogs, and goats. Hikers, bikers, horseback-riders, and cross-country skiers enjoy a scenic 18-mile railroad bed that evokes the spirit of the town's most famous native. Depending on the season, opportunities for downhill skiing, snowboarding, and zip-lining can be found elsewhere in the Catskills playground.

Most wedding packages include party lights, ice, trash removal, early arrival storage, restrooms, attendants for custodial, bathroom and parking services, tiki torches, and bonfire materials. Fireworks are extra.

On the Ropes

One couple share a favorite moment from their wedding day.

MARIA & KRIS | OCTOBER 20, 2019 | MARGARETVILLE

When Hudson Valley natives Maria and Kris decided to get married, they found the planning stage overwhelming. "We were not able to find places and things we really loved," recalls Maria, who says they ultimately decided to elope, to get "back to the bare bones of what would make our wedding authentic, make it the most meaningful." (The experience led her to found Adventure Elopements of the Hudson Valley, to help other couples do the same.)

"It was just my mom and my brother and his parents," says Maria. "We rented an Airbnb in the Catskills. It was absolutely gorgeous. We were walking along this path in the woods, and we decided to get some pictures closer to the water, on stepping stones that led to the creek. [The rope swing] was hanging just nearby. Kris was like, 'I'm totally going to do this.' He went for it, hopped on, and launched himself. It was ridiculous.

"I told him, 'Don't die on our wedding day.' We were already soaked because it was pouring rain the entire day, and both of us refused to go inside. I thought: Worst-case scenario, he's not going to get more wet than he already is. It's so, so him. We laugh hysterically every day to the point that I'm crying. On our wedding day, laughing and enjoying myself was one of the things I remember most."
