

A century later, reparations for Greenwood still elusive

More than 100 years have passed since the Greenwood neighborhood in Tulsa was burned to the ground. Twenty years have passed since a statewide commission recommended economic reparations be made to survivors and descendants of the Tulsa Race Massacre whose homes and businesses were destroyed.

But today, state and local governments in Oklahoma barely have begun to address the economic losses suffered by Black residents and business owners in the massacre.

“The state was complicit, the city was complicit, the county was complicit,” said state Rep. Regina Goodwin, D-Tulsa, herself a descendant of a survivor of the massacre.

On May 31 through June 1, 1921, a mob of white residents – many of them deputized and given weapons by city officials – destroyed what was at the time the wealthiest Black community in the nation, dubbed “Black Wall Street.” Estimates of those killed range from 75 to 300 dead, almost all Black residents of the Greenwood neighborhood. Property losses included more than 1,200 homes, 191 businesses, a junior high school, several churches, and the only hospital in the district.

The Red Cross issued reports on the incident in 1921 that noted that the following year, local residents filed more than $1.8 million in riot-related claims against the city – an amount equivalent to nearly $30 million today.

City officials at the time disallowed almost all of the claims and encumbered the rebuilding effort so that the neighborhood never returned to its former

Williams reports record earnings for quarter, year

BY JOURNAL RECORD STAFF

TULSA – Williams broke records on earnings related to natural gas delivery in 2021, the company announced Tuesday.

Commenting on results reported for the fourth quarter and full year, Williams President and CEO Alan Armstrong said growth experienced across all three of Tulsa-based Williams’ major business segments resulted in the company surpassing financial guidance despite raising it twice during the past year.

Highlights of unaudited results for the full year that ended Dec. 31 included:

- Net income of $1.514 billion, or $1.24 per diluted share.
- Adjusted net income of $1.658 billion, or $1.36 per diluted share – up 24% from 2020.
- Adjusted earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization, or EBITDA, of $5.635 billion – up $530 million or 10% from 2020.
- Cash flow from operations of $3.945 billion – up 13% from the prior year.
- Available funds from operations of $4.073 billion – up 12% from 2020.

For the fourth quarter, the company reported highlights including:

- Net income of $621 million, or 51 cents per diluted share.
- Adjusted net income of $476 million, or 39 cents per diluted share – up 25% and 26%, respectively from the fourth quarter of 2020.
- Adjusted EBITDA of $1.483 billion – up $147 million or 11% from the same quarter of 2020.

In addition to financial results, the company reported on several executed strategic transactions and expansion projects. Among other things, Williams:

- Finalized upstream joint ventures with Geo-Southern in the Haynesville region and with Crowheart in Wamsutter.
- Closed on acquisition of Sequent Energy Management.
- Signed agreements for Whale and Shenandoah Deepwater Gulf of Mexico expansions.
- Advanced 13 solar projects with a current total of 350 megawatts.

Armstrong said Williams also earned top rankings for environmental, social and corporate governance, or ESG.

“In addition to record financial and operational success in 2021, we received top ESG rankings for the midstream sector and won a prestigious award for industry leadership,” he said. “We also kicked off a multi-year modernization and emissions reduction program across our transmission network as part of our long-term commitment to safe, reliable and environmentally friendly operations. Furthermore, we expanded our efforts to invest in

Oklahoma lawmakers seek solutions to child care shortage

BY JOURNAL RECORD STAFF

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma lawmakers tasked with helping set priorities for spending pandemic relief funds have identified lack of affordable child care as a serious threat to the state's economic well-being.

"This one issue has had a crippling domino effect throughout our state's workforce," said Sen. Adam Pugh, R-Edmond, a co-chair of the Workforce and Economic Development Working Group for Pandemic Relief Funding. "Lack of availability and the enormous expense of child care are causing parents to make the difficult decision to stay out of the workforce, and we have to figure out solutions."

The working group has requested proposals for potentially solving problems. To be considered for first-round funding, they must be submitted by March 4. An online portal can be accessed at www.oklahoma.gov/ARPA.

"Now that we've received input pinpointing areas of greatest need, I'm excited to see proposals that will help us make the most of these one-time federal funds," said state Rep. Rhonda Baker, R-Yukon, the working group's other co-chair. "We need a strategic and smart plan that will get people back into the workforce to fill open positions while solving their child care needs."

Baker said lawmakers for several months have heard from parents and others about negative effects of the pandemic on families and businesses.

"One of the most common themes is the lack of access to and affordability of child care for those in the workforce and how that has contributed to our state's workforce shortage," she said. "(We need) to help these families as well as the business community that desperately needs employees."

A joint legislative committee was formed to help provide guidance on the state's use of $1.9 billion in federal American Rescue Plan Act funding. Under federal law, funds can only be used to respond to the public health emergency and negative economic effects caused by the pandemic. The committee receives and evaluates proposals through four working groups. It also can receive input directly from stakeholders, including community organizations and members of the public.

The serious child care shortage is not just a problem in Oklahoma. According to estimates of Child Care Aware, about 9% of licensed facilities across the United States have permanently closed since the start of the pandemic. The national organization has counted nearly 16,000 centers and in-home day care facilities that used to be operational across 37 states and were shuttered between December 2019 and March 2021.

The pandemic, Child Care Aware said, has made clear what many experts had long warned – that the absence of reliable and affordable child care puts limits on jobs that people can accept, makes it harder for workers to climb organizational ladders and ultimately restricts the ability of the broader economy to grow.

"It's really seen as an economic issue," Child Care Aware Chief of Policy and Practice Mario Cardona said. "It's about workforce participation. It's about employers who don't have to worry about whether they'll be able to rely upon employees."

Low wages earned by child care workers and tight profit margins for facilities contribute to problems.

According to a recent report from the U.S. Treasury Department, child care workers earn on average $24,230 a year. In 41 states, more than 15% of child care providers live below the poverty line, and half need public assistance. That results in high rates of turnover, with 26% to 40% of workers leaving jobs annually.

And not many child care facilities are positioned to offer better pay. Most tend to operate on profit margins of 1% or less.

Equalization Board certifies $10.49B in state revenues

OKLAHOMA CITY (JR) – The Oklahoma Board of Equalization met on Tuesday to certify revenues available for appropriation for the fiscal year 2023 budget. The amount initially certified in December was $10.3 billion. The amount certified Tuesday was $10.49 billion.

"The revenue figures show Oklahoma's economy is still strong, but I emphatically believe it is in the best interest of the state that we continue to take a fiscally conservative approach. It's important to remember that of the $10.49 billion certified, nearly $1.3 billion is made up of one-time carryover funds and special cash from previous sessions," Senate Appropriations Chairman Roger Thompson, R-Oklahoma, said in a statement. "Oklahoma has continued to benefit from federal dollars related to the pandemic, which helped these numbers. Knowing that will change, and that energy prices will not always remain as high as they are now, we must be cautious in our approach to the budget."

Thompson said the state needs to continue to boost savings for emergencies and to make careful decisions while the economy is strong to ensure that it remains prepared for whatever may come in the next few years.

Democrats on the Senate Finance Committee also responded to the BOE's certification.

"We have a mountain of need, especially when we look at the long-term impact of the pandemic," said state Sen. Julia Kirt, D-Oklahoma City. "Oklahomans face huge mental health effects. Uncertain economic impacts will continue to have a ripple effect. Our public schools face incredible challenges being resilient and serving our students."

"Oklahomans have needs that require immediate, increased, and sustained investment," Kirt continued. "(They) are counting on us to make responsible and courageous decisions that will create greater opportunities for future generations of Oklahomans."

Added state Sen. Carri Hicks, D-Oklahoma City: "Going forward, we believe we will see the greatest return on investment if our tax dollars are used to help the people most impacted by the pandemic. Increased investment in our state's most critical needs will boost economic growth and reduce poverty. Taxpayers expect the Legislature to make smart investments, not stash our tax dollars in government savings accounts, leaving much needed funding on the table."

Stocks slide further amid Ukraine crisis; S&P in correction

NEW YORK (AP) – Stocks closed broadly lower Tuesday after Russia sent forces into Ukraine's eastern region and the U.S., European Union and U.K. responded with economic sanctions.

The rising geopolitical tensions kept financial markets on edge, pulling the S&P 500 into a correction – Wall Street speak for a drop of at least 10% from its recent peak, but no more than 20%.

The benchmark index fell 44.11 points, or 1%, to 4,304.76. That puts it 10.3% below the all-time high it set on Jan. 3. The last correction for the index was in the spring of 2020, as the pandemic upended the global economy. That correction worsened into a bear market – a decline of 20% or more – as the S&P 500 sank nearly 34% in about a month.

“We're overdue, and right now the market has been knocked for a loop from the one-two punch of higher interest rates plus geopolitical tensions,” said Sam Stovall, chief investment strategist at CFRA.

Nasdaq composite also lost more than 1%.

The latest losses come as investors closely watched the crisis in Ukraine a day after Russia recognized the independence of several regions in Eastern Ukraine and decided to send in forces. On Tuesday afternoon, President Joe Biden announced the U.S. was ordering heavy financial sanctions against Russian banks and oligarchs, declaring that Moscow has flagrantly violated international law by invading Ukraine. Biden also said the U.S. was moving additional troops to the Baltic states on NATO's eastern flank.

Earlier in the day, the 27 European Union members unanimously agreed to levy their own initial set of sanctions targeting Russian officials over their actions in Ukraine.

U.S. crude oil prices jumped 1.4% after earlier rising more than 3% as energy markets remained volatile. European natural gas prices jumped after Germany withdrew a key document needed for certification of the Nord Stream 2 gas pipeline from Russia.

Germany puts pause on Nord Stream 2 pipeline

BY DAVID MCHUGH

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany – German Chancellor Olaf Scholz has suspended the certification process for the Nord Stream 2 natural gas pipeline after Russia recognized separatist-held regions in eastern Ukraine, with the West fearing a full-scale invasion is next.

The undersea pipeline directly links Russian gas to Europe via Germany and is complete but not yet operating. It has become a major target as Western governments try to exert leverage on Russia to deter further military moves against its neighbor.

Here are key things to understand about the pipeline:

- It's a 764-mile-long natural gas pipeline under the Baltic Sea, running from Russia to Germany's Baltic coast.

It runs parallel to an earlier Nord Stream pipeline and would double its capacity, to 110 billion cubic meters of gas a year. It means Gazprom can send gas to Europe's pipeline system without using existing pipelines running through Ukraine and Poland. The pipeline has been filled with gas but had been awaiting approval by Germany and the European Commission.

- Germany's utility regulator was reviewing the pipeline for compliance with European regulations on fair competition. It's that approval process that Scholz said Tuesday he was suspending. Germany was required to submit a report on how the pipeline would affect energy security, and Scholz said that report was being withdrawn.

- Russia's state-owned gas giant Gazprom says it will meet Europe's growing need for affordable natural gas and complement existing pipelines through Belarus and Ukraine. Nord Stream 2 would offer an alternative to Ukraine's aging system that Gazprom says needs refurbishment, lower costs by saving transit fees paid to Ukraine, and avoid episodes like brief 2006 and 2009 gas cutoffs over price and payment disputes between Russia and Ukraine. Europe is a key market for Gazprom, whose sales support the Russian government budget. Europe needs gas because it's replacing decommissioned coal and nuclear plants before renewable energy sources such as wind and solar are sufficiently built up.

- The U.S., European NATO allies such as Poland, and Ukraine have opposed Nord Stream 2 going back before the Biden administration, saying it increases Europe's dependence on Russian gas and gives Russia the possibility of using gas as a geopolitical weapon. Europe imports most of its gas and gets roughly 40% of its supply from Russia. The pipeline, which went forward under Merkel, has been an irritant in U.S.-German relations. Biden waived sanctions against the pipeline's operator when it was almost complete in return for an agreement from Germany to take action against Russia if it used gas as a weapon or attacks Ukraine.

- While Europe needs Russian gas, Gazprom also needs the European market. That interdependence is why many think Russia won't cut off supplies to Europe even if the Ukraine conflict escalates further, and Russian officials have underlined they have no intention to do that. Meanwhile, the Ukraine crisis, on top of a winter shortage, has already given European governments more reason to find their gas somewhere else, such as through liquefied gas brought by ship from the U.S., Algeria and other places.

USDA head: US farmers to help if Ukraine exports threatened

BY ISABEL DEBRE

Associated Press

American wheat farmers will boost production and prevent supply chain problems in the event that a possible Russian invasion of Ukraine chokes off agricultural exports from the global grains powerhouse, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Tom Vilsack said.

Vilsack told The Associated Press that a conflict in Ukraine would present an “opportunity, obviously, for us to step in and help our partners, help them through a difficult time and situation.”

“We'll obviously continue to look for opportunities to expand those (export) markets,” Vilsack said.

A Russian invasion and blockade of Ukraine could jeopardize the country's crucial wheat exports, which account for 12% of the world's total, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Ukraine also is estimated to supply 16% of the world's corn exports this year. Its grain production has boomed over the last decade. Last year, the state harvested nearly 33 million metric tons of wheat, the USDA reported, a stark increase from the previous year.

The mounting tensions and militarization along the Russia-Ukraine border, along with pandemic-induced supply chain backlogs and spikes in fertilizer and farm equipment costs, helped push wheat prices to their highest level in nearly a decade last year.

A bushel of wheat was trading in Chicago at over $8 on Saturday – just below the multi-year high hit last year. The price of a bushel of corn climbed 0.5% on Saturday to exceed $6.50.

The disruption in commodity markets wrought by an invasion would most directly affect the biggest buyers of Ukrainian wheat in South Asia, Europe, Africa and the Middle East. Many countries, like Egypt, depend on wheat imports to provide subsidized bread to impoverished populations. That raises the risk of political and economic turmoil if those countries have to pay more to ship in wheat from the U.S. or farther afield.

“We certainly hope that doesn't happen,” Vilsack said of a potential conflict driving up wheat prices. “I wouldn't expect and anticipate that American consumers are necessarily going to see a direct impact, but European consumers, I think that's a different story.”

1 OKLAHOMA CITY Anti-abortion bills advance in Senate

An Oklahoma Senate committee approved five anti-abortion bills, including one that would ban abortions 30 days after conception, before many women know they're pregnant.

All five measures were approved Monday by the Senate Health and Human Services Committee on party-line votes and now head to the full Senate for consideration.

Four of the bills were written by Senate President Pro Tempore Greg Treat, a longtime abortion opponent. One of the measures calls for a statewide vote to amend the Oklahoma Constitution to clarify there is no guaranteed right to an abortion in Oklahoma.

A fifth bill, by state Sen. Julie Daniels, R-Bartlesville, is similar to a recently passed Texas law that prohibits abortions after cardiac activity has been detected and allows third parties to sue abortion providers and others who help a woman obtain an abortion.

All five measures were condemned by abortion rights groups.

"Patients have shared devastating stories of trying to access care while abortion rights are under attack, but politicians continue to put their own agendas ahead of individuals' rights to make private medical decisions," Planned Parenthood Great Plains Votes Interim President Emily Wales said in a statement.

DALLAS Holly Energy reports earnings

Holly Energy Partners LP reported financial results on Tuesday for the fourth quarter of 2021.

Net income attributable to HEP for the quarter was $45.6 million, amounting to 43 cents per basic and diluted limited partner unit. That compared to $51.3 million in earnings or 49 cents per unit reported for the fourth quarter of 2020.

Distributable cash flow was $63.1 million for the quarter, a decrease of $6.9 million, or 9.9%, compared to the fourth quarter of 2020, HEP said in a release.

The decrease in net income was mainly due to lower volumes on pipeline systems, lower ongoing revenues attributed to HollyFrontier Corp.'s conversion of its Cheyenne refinery to renewable diesel production and to higher operating expenses.

Revenues from crude pipelines were $125.6 million, an increase of $6.7 million compared to the year ended Dec. 31, 2020. Shipments averaged 408,600 barrels per day, compared to 387,700 barrels per day. The increases were mainly attributable to increased volumes on systems in Wyoming and Utah partially offset by lower volumes on pipeline systems servicing HollyFrontier's Navajo refinery. Volumes also increased due to the addition of volumes on the Cushing Connect Pipeline in Oklahoma, which went into service at the end of the third quarter of 2021.

"HEP delivered another quarter of strong operational performance and solid financial results despite the planned turnaround and unplanned maintenance at HollyFrontier's Navajo refinery," HEP Chief Executive Officer Michael Jennings said. "Looking forward, we expect to hold the quarterly distribution constant at 35 cents per unit during 2022, and we remain committed to our distribution strategy focused on funding all capital expenditures and distributions within operating cash flow and maintaining distributable cash flow coverage of 1.3 times or greater."

Progress OKC welcomes new executive director

Kimberly Statum-Francisco will begin as executive director of Progress OKC on March 7. Her professional experience and roots in Oklahoma City will help Progress OKC advance economic and social resources in areas of Oklahoma City that have traditionally been under-resourced or disinvested. As a CDC, Progress OKC develops and manages affordable housing, supports small and minority-owned businesses and has other revitalization activities. The cornerstone of the organization's success has been its collaborations with residents and partners.

Kimberly's background positions her perfectly for the leadership position. In her most recent role as manager of the Ralph Ellison Library, she worked with state and local agencies, community-based nonprofits and local school systems to provide programming and services based on community needs. She led a systemwide effort to curate a hundred-year history of the Ralph Ellison library in collaboration with community stakeholders, leaders and individuals. Other experience includes work for nonprofits in the areas of education and training, federal, state and foundation grant acquisition and administration and fundraising.

Kimberly understands the time and energy required to rebuild trust and inclusion. A lifelong resident of northeast Oklahoma City, she has seen disconnect between the leaders, financiers and developers and the needs and desires of underrepresented people who live in the impacted neighborhoods. She is motivated to build on the inroads made by Progress OKC and the Alliance in visioning and developing with community inclusion.

The Alliance founded Progress OKC in 2016 to better support investment and development in key areas. One of Progress OKC's first projects was grant writing and fundraising for the renovations of the auditorium at the Douglass into a premier performing arts and community meeting venue.

Progress OKC has also taken the lead on redeveloping areas for affordable housing, improving parks and setting up programs to help minority-owned businesses.

Progress OKC developed the Building Businesses Back Better (B4) program to connect small Oklahoma City businesses with consultants who provide human resources, marketing and financial services to help the business recover from COVID.

In 2021, Progress OKC launched the KIVA OKC lending program to help local entrepreneurs and small businesses access low-barrier, micro loans. The program has fully funded 18 local businesses with nearly $100,000 in total loans.

I look forward to the positive impact of Progress OKC's next projects under the Kimberly's leadership.

Cathy O'Connor is the president of The Alliance for Economic Development of Oklahoma City.

Check your privilege – a case for Bitcoin

Check your privilege. We don't even stop to consider that when we need to store or transmit economic value we rely on centralized institutions to act as a trusted third party to ensure our assets remain safe, secure, and go where they're supposed to go. This reliance is ingrained in our daily existence. Many of us Westerners are privileged to not even have to think about it.

We are not among the "unbanked." We can open a federally insured bank account with little effort. We can secure a credit card with generous rewards for its use.

For us, the idea that we could use the Bitcoin network to store our hard-earned economic value and send it to anyone in the world without needing a trusted third party seems totally foreign. Not everyone is so lucky.

A staggering 7.1 million U.S. households were unbanked in 2019, according to the FDIC. These households often rely on check-cashing and money transmittal services like those offered by companies such as Western Union that charge truly exorbitant fees. It's hard to get ahead financially if you must pay up to double-digit percentage fees to transfer funds. Bitcoin fixes this.

The unbanked population in the U.S. pales in comparison to that of poorer countries around the world. Many countries have populations dependent upon receiving funds from family living and working internationally. El Salvador's receipt of foreign remittances totaled almost $6 billion in 2020, nearly 23%(!) of the country's gross domestic product. Foreign remittance and currency exchange fees are amazingly high. It turns out that Bitcoin fixes this too. Check out how Jack Mallers and Strike are leveraging Bitcoin and the Lightning Network to cultivate a more inclusive financial system and disrupt the traditional payment rails.

Talk to an average person living in a hyper-inflationary country like Venezuela. Chat with a Cypriot who woke up to see 6.75% less in his bank account last decade as the authorities required account holders to fund a "bail in" of the Bank of Cyprus. They will innately understand the benefit of a decentralized, trustless, fixed-supply monetary network like Bitcoin.

I bet there are some truckers in Canada right now who would speak to the perils of trusting the banking system to provide access and security for their funds. If you disagree with the truckers' grievances, I'm sure you can think of a different, recent group of protestors that you sympathize with. How would you feel if the authorities invoked emergency authority to freeze their funds? The invocation of emergency powers such that a government can freeze the assets of its protesting citizens without due process in the court system is a chilling precedent. Bitcoin, with proper self-custody in place, can fix this.

In 1998, Nobel Prize-winner Paul Krugman predicted "by 2005 or so, it will become clear that the Internet's impact on the economy has been no greater than the fax machine's." It's natural to be confused about a new technology and its implications. Bitcoin is unlike anything that came before it. It is the best form of money ever conceived. It has the potential to reshape society for the better. Here's hoping.

Broyles apologizes for drunken behavior at sleepover

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A U.S. House candidate in Oklahoma has apologized after reports that she became intoxicated at a Valentine's Day weekend sleepover for middle-school-aged girls, berated several of the children and vomited in a hamper.

Democrat Abby Broyles, 32, told television station KFOR that she had an adverse reaction after drinking wine and taking sleep medication given to her by a friend.

"Instead of helping me sleep, I hallucinated," Broyles told the station in a televised interview. "And I don't remember anything until I woke up or came to, and I was throwing up in a hamper."

She said she was invited to the slumber party by a good friend from law school who was the mother of one of the girls.

Parents and at least one of the girls who were at the sleepover told the online news outlet NonDoc, which first reported the story, that Broyles used profanity and berated several of the 12- and 13-year-old girls at the party, commenting on one girl's acne and another's Hispanic ethnicity.

The parent of one of the girls, Sarah Matthews, tweeted last week that she was disappointed that Broyles had not reached out to the girls to apologize.

"For someone who pontificates to be undyingly pro woman, I am disgusted by your behavior and find it appalling you couldn't understand why their parents are angry," Matthews wrote.

Broyles, who initially denied to NonDoc that she had attended the party, apologized last week during her interview with KFOR, a news channel for which she used to work as a journalist.

"I want to say sorry from the bottom of my heart, I apologize for any hurt or damage or trauma that my behavior, when I didn't know what I was doing, caused," Broyles said. "I'm deeply sorry."

In a statement provided to The Associated Press on Tuesday, Broyles said she doesn't believe she would have said the things she's accused of saying and that she has no plans to drop out of the race.

"The things I'm accused to have said are not who I am. They're not a reflection of my beliefs at all," Broyles said. "It's clear this media smear campaign is politically backed, and I won't stop fighting for Oklahomans."

Broyles, an attorney who was the Democratic nominee for U.S. Senate from Oklahoma in 2020, announced last year she planned to run against Republican U.S. Rep. Stephanie Bice for the 5th Congressional District that includes Oklahoma City.

CareerTech board names interim state director

BY JOURNAL RECORD STAFF

OKLAHOMA CITY — An interim director has been named to lead Oklahoma's CareerTech System following the March 1 departure of current director Marcie Mack.

Lee Denney, a veterinarian, educator, former longtime state lawmaker and advocate for energy, tourism and other avenues of economic development, was named by members of the State Board of Career and Technology Education to provide oversight of 29 tech center districts until a new permanent director can be found.

Lee Denney

In a release, CareerTech board members also said that they've created a subcommittee to work with a search firm to look nationwide for a permanent CareerTech director. They identified the three subcommittee members as Randy Gilbert, Brian Bobek and Edward Hilliary Jr.

Mack announced last month that she would leave the director's post to take a position as manager of talent development with MidAmerica Industrial Park in Pryor.

Denney, a resident of Cushing, served in the Oklahoma House of Representatives from 2004-2016. She served on various committees, including appropriations and budget; higher education and career tech; energy; economic development and tourism; arts and culture; and banking.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Joy Hofmeister, who chairs the CareerTech board, described Denney as a fierce advocate for students and Oklahoma career technology education.

"She's a seasoned leader in both state and federal arenas with strong relationships and knowledge to lead through this transition and legislative session as the interim state director," Hofmeister said.

After leaving the Oklahoma House of Representatives, Denney served as department head of the veterinary technology program at Oklahoma State University-Oklahoma City from 2016-2017 and as state director of rural development for the U.S. Department of Agriculture from 2017-2021.

She also has worked as recruitment coordinator for the OSU College of Veterinary Medicine and taught anatomy and physiology classes at Central Technology Center in Drumright. She serves on boards of the Oklahoma Academy for State Goals, the Oklahoma Public Resource Center, Friends for Folks, the Oklahoma Commission on the Status of Women and Payne County Youth Services.

Denney earned both a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics and a doctor of veterinary medicine degree from Oklahoma State University.

"I would like to thank Dr. Mack for her dedicated service to CareerTech. She has been an outstanding director, and I am grateful to know she will be continuing her work in developing and improving Oklahoma's workforce," Denney said in a statement.

Global humanitarian leader Dr. Paul Farmer dies at 62

BOSTON (AP) – Dr. Paul Farmer, a U.S. physician, humanitarian and author renowned for providing health care to millions of impoverished people worldwide and who co-founded the global nonprofit Partners in Health, has died. He was 62.

The Boston-based organization confirmed Farmer's death on Monday, calling it "devastating" and noting he unexpectedly passed away in his sleep from an acute cardiac event while in Rwanda, where he had been teaching.

Farmer was a professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School and chief of the division of global health equity at Brigham and Women's Hospital. He wrote extensively on health, human rights and social inequality, according to Partners in Health.

"A compassionate physician and infectious disease specialist, a brilliant and influential medical anthropologist, and among the greatest humanitarians of our time – perhaps all time – Paul dedicated his life to improving human health and advocating for health equity and social justice on a global scale," wrote George Q. Daley, dean of Harvard University's Faculty of Medicine, in a statement.

Partners in Health, founded in 1987, said its mission is "to provide a preferential option for the poor in health care." The organization began its work in Cange, a rural village in Haiti's central plateau, and later expanded its operations to regions including Africa, Eastern Europe and Latin America.

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Tracy Kidder, who wrote the nonfiction book Mountains Beyond Mountains: The Quest of Dr. Paul Farmer, A Man Who Would Cure the World, told The Associated Press the two traveled together for a month as Farmer treated prisoners and impoverished people in Haiti, Moscow and Paris.

"He was an important figure in the world," Kidder said. "He had a way of looking around corners and of connecting things. He couldn't obviously go and cure the whole world all by himself, but he could, with help of his friends, give proof of possibility."

One of Kidder's strongest memories of Farmer occurred in Peru, where the doctor was treating patients with multidrug-resistant tuberculosis. Kidder recalled a woman wearing a Mickey Mouse shirt who followed them to their car, looking very shy.

With her head down, she said, "Thank you," to Farmer in Spanish. Kidder recalled: "Paul turned, took each of her hands in his and said, 'For me, it is a privilege,' in Spanish."

He added that Farmer was instrumental in getting AIDS treatments, and created various health systems around the world.

"It really humiliates the nay-sayers, who think it's somehow OK for some people to get health care and others not," Kidder said. "It just drove him nuts."

Michelle Karshan, vice president of a nonprofit prison health care system in Haiti who worked closely with Farmer, said he was determined, innovative and always knew how to get around obstacles and bureaucracy.

"He didn't take no for an answer," she said. "He didn't think anybody was too poor or too illiterate to be entitled to receive health care."

She noted that when the World Health Organization resisted giving HIV medication to people who were illiterate in Haiti for fear they would not know when or how to take it, Farmer set up his own program and created a chart that relied on the sun's position. He also hired people known as "accompaniers," who would hike through Haiti's rough mountainous terrain to make sure patients had water, food and were taking their medications.

"I'm so sad for all the people who are not going to have him in their lives. He was there for everybody," Karshan said.

Haiti's Prime Minister Ariel Henry praised Farmer's work, as did former U.S. President Bill Clinton.

"Paul Farmer changed the way health care is delivered in the most impoverished places on Earth. He saw every day as a new opportunity to teach, learn, give, and serve – and it was impossible to spend any time with him and not feel the same," Clinton said in a statement.

At the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, with thousands of cases reported daily in Massachusetts, local health departments were overwhelmed by the task of contact tracing to help slow the spread of the disease.

The state launched a contact tracing collaborative in April 2020, and asked Partners in Health to lead the initiative, which made more than 2.7 million calls to residents at a total cost of about $158 million, according to the state.

Farmer is survived by his Haitian wife, Didi Bertrand Farmer, and their three children.

NY won't enforce booster mandate for health care workers

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) – New York will not enforce its mandate requiring health care workers to get COVID-19 boosters in light of concerns about staffing shortages, state health officials said.

Gov. Kathy Hochul pointed to a troubling rise in breakthrough infections when she announced the mandate in January. The Democrat's administration set a deadline of Feb. 21.

But state health commissioner Mary Bassett said the decision to drop enforcement of the mandate reflects the reality that booster rates remain far below 100% in nursing homes and hospitals.

Nursing homes and hospitals in New York have vaccinated nearly all employees, but health experts worry that booster rates are too low to protect against future surges as a vaccination's efficacy wanes over time. COVID-19 vaccine booster shots provide 90% protection against hospitalization, according to data published by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention last month.

About 43% of roughly 146,000 nursing home staffers across New York were fully vaccinated with a booster shot, according to The Associated Press' analysis of the latest state Department of Health data released Wednesday.

That's up from about 20% as of early January, when Hochul first announced the booster mandate.

Still, several dozen nursing homes reported as few as 0% of workers with booster shots, with rates lowest in Brooklyn as well as upstate counties in the Finger Lakes, central and northern New York.

Meanwhile, 54% of 514,000 hospital staff have booster shots, according to state data. Fewer than one-third of workers reportedly had booster shots at two dozen hospitals from the Bronx, to Rockland County, to Utica, to Erie County.

State health officials are pointing to a rosier figure: the number of staffers who have a booster shot or say they're willing.

"While we are making progress with 75% of staff received or are willing to receive their booster, the reality is that not enough healthcare workers will be boosted by next week's requirement in order to avoid substantial staffing issues in our already overstressed healthcare system," Bassett said in a statement.

In recent weeks, health care industry leaders – including Greater New York Hospital Association President Kenneth Raske – have urged the state to rethink the mandate.

"The state has recently heard from numerous stakeholders about how enforcement of the booster mandate could exacerbate New York's health care staffing shortage, which is the subject of a declared emergency," Raske said in a statement.

LeadingAge New York CEO Jim Clyne praised New York's move to halt enforcement of the mandate as "smart."

Pelé in hospital in Brazil

SAO PAULO – Pelé has extended a scheduled hospital stay due to a urinary infection.

The 81-year-old Pelé went in on Feb. 13 to continue treatment for his colon cancer, and days later doctors found the infection, Hospital Albert Einstein in Sao Paulo said in a statement on Monday.

“His clinical conditions are stable, and his release should take place on the next few days,” the hospital said.

Pelé has had chemotherapy to treat the tumor that was found during routine exams at the end of August. He was briefly put in intensive care shortly after the surgery on his colon, and has since recovered.

He was discharged on Sept. 30, almost one month after being hospitalized, but has spent more days in hospital since.

Pelé had been recovering at his home in Guarujá, outside Sao Paulo. He posted on social media several updates on his improving health.

Pelé won the 1958, 1962 and 1970 World Cups and remains Brazil’s all-time leading scorer with 77 in 92 matches.

$2.2M grant to address nursing burnout

OMAHA, Neb. – The University of Nebraska Medical Center College of Nursing has received a $2.2 million federal grant to address burnout among the state’s nurses as the coronavirus pandemic stretches into a third year.

The three-year grant is funded through the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services’ Health Resources and Services, the Omaha World-Herald reported. It’s part of an estimated $103 million in coronavirus relief funding to reduce burnout and promote mental health among the nation’s health care workforce.

The school’s initiative will focus on nursing students and nurses and their employers in rural and medically underserved areas in hopes of reversing nursing shortages, said Alyson Hanish, an assistant professor in UNMC’s nursing college.

“We had a nursing shortage before the pandemic, but the pandemic has exacerbated it,” Hanish said. “We want to recruit nurses, but then keep them healthy and well so that they want to have long professional careers in nursing.”

The effort will see deployment of a stress management program developed by Dr. Rebecca Wyoske and others in UNMC’s psychiatry department that will be tailored to meet the needs of nursing students and working nurses. It includes ways to manage acute stress and reduce chronic stress.

The program will be implemented across all five campuses of UNMC’s nursing college. For working nurses, they will focus primarily on the state’s smaller hospitals and offer the program both as wellness training and free continuing education credits.

Pope hails health care workers as heroes

VATICAN CITY – Pope Francis on Sunday hailed health care workers as heroes for their service every day, not just during the pandemic, asking the public in St. Peter’s Square to join with him in applause.

Francis clapped his hands in what he said was a “great thank you” for health workers, including volunteers, who care for the sick. Italy was marking Sunday as a national day to pay tribute to health care workers.

The national professional association of doctors and dentists counts 370 physicians who have died of COVID-19 in Italy.

“We must recall the many doctors, nurses, volunteers, who are close to the sick, treat them, make them feel better, help them,” Francis said in his weekly appearance from a window of the Apostolic Palace overlooking the square.

No one saves themselves, Francis said. “In illness we need someone who saves us, who helps us.”

He hailed “the heroic health care personnel, who made plain this heroism in COVID times, but the heroism remains every day.”

“For our doctors, nurses, volunteers, applause and a great thank you,” Francis said. He then started clapping and hundreds of people in the square below did, too.

ME resigns amid backlog of autopsies

ANNAPOLIS, Md. – Maryland’s chief medical examiner resigned Friday amid a backlog of autopsies and the departures of staff members.

Dr. Victor Weedn wrote in a short email that his resignation was effective Friday, according to Bruce Goldfarb, a spokesperson for the medical examiner’s office.

The Maryland Post Mortem Examiners Commission announced that Dr. Pamela Southall will serve as the interim chief, effective immediately.

“The Post Mortem Examiners Commission welcomes Dr. Southall and looks forward to her leadership at the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner (OCME) during a critical time,” the commission said in a news release.

COVID-19 restrictions lifted in Britain

LONDON – British Prime Minister Boris Johnson is scrapping the last domestic coronavirus restrictions in England, including the requirement for people with COVID-19 to self-isolate, even as he acknowledged Monday the potential for new and more deadly variants of the virus.

Johnson told lawmakers in the House of Commons that the country was “moving from government restrictions to personal responsibility” as part of a plan for treating COVID-19 like other transmissible illnesses such as flu.

He said it marked an end to “two of the darkest, grimmest years in our peacetime history.”

“Today is not the day we can declare victory over COVID, because this virus is not going away,” Johnson said at a televised news conference. “But it is the day when all the efforts of the last two years finally enabled us to protect ourselves whilst restoring our liberties in full.”

Johnson confirmed that mandatory self-isolation for people with COVID-19 will end starting Thursday and the routine tracing of infected people’s contacts will stop. People will still be advised to stay home if they are sick – but will no longer get extra financial support.

professionals.

“In her new role, Dr. Southall will lead the office’s efforts to review caseloads and work begun by the Maryland Department of Health (MDH) to recruit forensic pathologists and secure additional resources for the office while maintaining efficient operations,” the commission said in a news release.

The medical examiner’s office sought help earlier this month in managing a backlog of more than 200 bodies awaiting autopsies. The backlog began in mid-December but has gotten significantly worse since then.

The office is responsible for determining the cause and manner of death if a person is not under the care of a physician, or if the death is unexpected or occurs under suspicious or unusual circumstances.

enough time to get enough boosted staff members to serve the residents and patients we have to serve,” he said.

New York already requires health care workers to get vaccinated, with exemptions for workers who have a medical reason for not being eligible to receive the shot. The state was set to join a few states that have announced plans to require boosters for health care workers, including California, Connecticut and New Mexico.

In Connecticut, fear of staffing shortages also led to the General Assembly’s vote last week to extend the deadline for Lamont’s executive order that requires nursing home staff be fully vaccinated with a booster shot. They faced a Feb. 11 deadline to get a booster, but the legislation extended it to March 7.

Since December, Hochul’s administration has forced several dozen short-staffed hospitals to halt elective surgeries. Fewer hospitals have faced such restrictions as staffing crunches ease.

Bassett said state health officials will take another look at the booster mandate in three months to decide whether New York should take more steps to increase booster rates.

She also said the state will work with hospital and long-term care home leaders on potential ways to expand access to boosters.

Clyne said that could include ways to offer more vaccination opportunities at assisted living homes.

But he said the biggest hurdle remains figuring out how to fight against false and misleading statements about the COVID-19 booster spread on social media, particularly in rural and minority communities.

“Education is the biggest issue,” Clyne said. “It just takes time.”

Survivors offer hope for people addicted to painkillers

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) – Two years ago, Craig Lopez sat in an audience, listening to speakers talk about the grip addiction had on their lives and the years – sometimes decades – it took to break that hold.

He knew the storyline all too well, both as an addict and the parent of one. After back surgeries from an auto accident and injuries from playing sports, Lopez, who'd been drafted years earlier by the Baltimore Orioles, misused pills prescribed for the pain.

"I was probably taking enough to kill a small herd of elephants every day," he said.

But no one knew his secret. He was too good at hiding behind the various masks he wore, as a husband and father, physical education teacher and successful baseball coach at Mountain View High School in Stafford County. He also considered himself a man of God, but felt he didn't deserve love from a supreme being – or anyone for that matter – given the way narcotics ruled him.

Lopez decided to stop the lie and end his life.

"I had no self-worth, no self-esteem and I felt like I had let everybody down," he said. "I did everything in my power to be off the face of this planet."

Five years ago this May – he remembers it like it was yesterday – the father of three left his home in Fredericksburg and headed south. He bought a fish sandwich, paid cash for a hotel room in Thornburg, then chewed up every pill he had. He chased down the mix of pain and sleeping medication with a half-gallon of rum.

When he miraculously survived the suicide attempt, Lopez became a changed man. He was determined to learn how to open up to those close to him as well as share his story with strangers. Maybe he could spare someone else from the almost-death spiral that he endured.

"I truly am a walking miracle, to be honest with you," he said. "Even with the horror of my story, whether people accept it or don't accept it, it's a gift to be able to share it."

Lopez will be one of several speakers at "Inspiring Hope," a Feb. 26 event in which participants will describe the toll addiction has taken on their lives and how they were able to recover. In addition to his own experience, he'll also address another byproduct of addiction – something he felt at the first "Inspiring Hope" event in February 2020, when he was in the audience with other grieving parents.

Two months earlier, his son, Jacob, died from a drug overdose "after he had made a couple choices he could never forgive himself for," his father said. Lopez believes the drug cocktail that killed his 26-year-old son contained fentanyl, a powerful synthetic painkiller that's being made illegally and mixed into almost every drug on the street – with lethal results.

"I'm hearing that it's plentiful, easy to get a hold of and it's super cheap," said Pastor John Cook, who leads a recovery program at Mount Ararat Church in North Stafford. "It's also super easy to mix it with all these other things, but people have no idea what they're playing with."

Fentanyl poisoning deaths have doubled in the United States in the last two years, according to Families Against Fentanyl, a nonprofit organization founded by an Ohio man to bring attention to the crisis and to call for federal action. The Commission on Combating Synthetic Opioid Trafficking noted that 100,000 Americans died from overdoses in 2020, the majority from fentanyl or something similar to it.

In a report released this month, the commission said early numbers suggest that deaths from synthetic opioids will hit their highest numbers in history in 2021 by the time data is collected.

"The overdose crisis in the United States claims more lives each year than firearms, suicide, homicide or motor vehicle crashes," the commission states. "This is one of our most pressing national security, law enforcement and public health challenges."

It's no wonder, when an amount as tiny as a grain of sand can kill a person, said Jeannie Lewis, a Spotsylvania

County woman who fought addiction to cocaine, pain pills and heroin.

"Drug dealers can sell you low-crap fentanyl and you might be getting that one grain of sand," she said. "When we get a batch of bad dope in town, we lose five or 10 people a week."

She said things were bad when she was out on the street, looking for any drug she could get. That was six years ago, before she did prison time for credit card theft and fraud – yet another byproduct of drug addiction.

Not only are dealers adding fentanyl to other drugs to jack up the high, but they're also mixing it with pain pills that "look exactly like what they get in the pharmacy so they think they're getting legitimate pills," Lewis said.

"It was scary when I was out there," she said, "but it's even scarier today."

As if the drugs circulating aren't deadly enough, Pastor Cook believes life during the second year of COVID-19 took an even greater toll on addicts. The ongoing isolation was a huge component, but so was the divisiveness prevalent in society: bickering over masks and vaccine mandates, the debates about cancel culture and critical race theory.

Greg Traber agrees. He's a substance abuse counselor – and former addict – who is helping to sponsor "Inspiring Hope" with his wife, Penny.

"The way our society is, with the pressure and the stress and everything going on with COVID, it seems like such a hopeless world we're living in right now," he said.

That's why the Trabers wanted to present their event again this year and to give participants the chance to see and greet each other in person, not virtually. Greg Traber and other counselors often quote a British journalist who says that the opposite of addiction isn't sobriety. It's community.

"The addict expects his family to care, but a lot of addicts don't expect strangers to care and that's what we want to be, we want to be that stranger who cares," Greg Traber said.

Cook, who says his drug of choice was alcohol, leads a Celebrate Recovery program at Mount Ararat and would like to see the program – or any 12-step program that includes going out and helping others – available every day of the week in the Fredericksburg area. He'd love for other churches to make it part of their ministries.

"When you are in the midst of your addiction, it's hard to fathom that there's a way out," Cook said. "To hear somebody say, 'Hey listen, I've been in your shoes and I know exactly where you're coming from and I'm here to tell you, not only is there a way out, but I'll walk you through it.'"

US virus cases, hospitalizations continue steady decline

BY LEAH WILLINGHAM
AND JONATHAN MATTISE
Associated Press

Average daily COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations are continuing to fall in the U.S., an indicator that the omicron variant's hold is weakening across the country.

Total confirmed cases reported Saturday barely exceeded 100,000, a sharp downturn from around 800,850 five weeks ago on Jan. 16, according to Johns Hopkins University data.

In New York, the number of cases went down by more than 50% over the last two weeks.

"I think what's influencing the decline, of course, is that omicron is starting to run out of people to infect," said Dr. Thomas Russo, professor and infectious disease chief at the University of Buffalo's Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences.

COVID-19 hospitalizations are down from a national seven-day average of 146,534 on Jan. 20 to 80,185 the week ending in Feb 13, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention COVID data tracker.

Public health experts say they are feeling hopeful that more declines are ahead and that the country is shifting from being in a pandemic to an "endemic" that is more consistent and predictable. However, many expressed concern that vaccine uptick in the U.S. has still been below expectations, concerns that are exacerbated by the lifting of COVID-19 restrictions.

Dr. William Schaffner of Vanderbilt University's School of Medicine said Sunday that the downturn in case numbers and hospitalizations is encouraging. He agreed that it likely has a lot to do with herd immunity.

"There are two sides to omicron's coin," he said. "The bad thing is that it can spread to a lot of people and make them mildly ill. The good thing is it can spread to a lot of people and make them mildly ill, because in doing so, it has created a lot of natural immunity."

However, Schaffner said it's much too early to "raise the banner of mission accomplished." As a public health expert, he said he'll be more comfortable if the decline sustains itself for another month or two.

"If I have a concern, it's that taking off the interventions, the restrictions, may be happening with a bit more enthusiasm and speed than makes me comfortable," he said. "My own little adage is, better to wear the mask for a month too long, than to take the mask off a month too soon and all of a sudden get another surge."

Officials in many states are cutting back on restrictions, saying they are moving away from treating the coronavirus pan-dem as a public health crisis and instead shifting to policy focused on prevention.

During a Friday news conference, Utah Gov. Spencer Cox announced that the state would be transitioning into what he called a "steady state" model starting in April in which Utah will close mass testing sites, report COVID-19 case counts on a more infrequent basis and advise residents to make personal choices to manage the risk of contracting the virus.

"Now, let me be clear, this is not the end of COVID, but it is the end – or rather the beginning – of treating COVID as we do other seasonal respiratory viruses," the Republican said.

Also on Friday, Boston lifted the city's proof of vaccine policy, which required patrons and staff of indoor spaces to show proof of vaccination.

"This news highlights the progress we've made in our fight against Covid-19 thanks to vaccines & boosters," Boston Mayor Michelle Wu said via Twitter.

Dr. Amy Gordon Bono, a Nashville primary care physician, said now is not the time to lessen vaccination efforts, but to double-down on them. In the spring of 2021 when vaccines were becoming more readily available, the U.S. was "eager to declare COVID independence," she said. Then came the delta and omicron surges.

Bono, who attended medical school at Tulane University in New Orleans, said the U.S. should approach COVID like hurricane season.

"You have to learn to live with COVID and you have to learn from it," she said.

One challenge is that each region has a unique landscape, she said. In the American South, for example, many restrictions have been lifted for a while or never existed in the first place. Yet it's also a region with relatively lower vaccination rates.

"We've suffered so much and if there's a way to help appease future suffering, it's having a more vaccinated community," she said.

In Buffalo, Russo said he sees two possible future outcomes. In one, the U.S. experiences a fairly quiet spring and summer while immunity is still strong. He said in that scenario, it's likely immunity will wane and there will be a bump of new cases in the cooler months during flu season, but hopefully not a severe surge.

In the second – the one concerning public health experts – a new variant evolves and evades the immunity wall that was built up from both omicron infections and vaccinations.

"Whether such a variant can evolve is the big question, right?" he said. "That is the concern that we'll have to see through. Omicron was the first version of that, and there is this sort of adage that 'well, over time, viruses evolve to be less virulent,' but that's not really true. Viruses evolve to be able to infect us."

Trial underway for Ohio doctor charged in hospital deaths

BY ANDREW WELSH-HUGGINS
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio – The trial of an Ohio doctor accused in multiple hospital deaths began Tuesday with the defendant turning down a possible last-minute plea deal, and jurors hearing two sides of what led to the deaths of 14 patients under the doctor's care.

Dr. William Husel is accused of ordering excessive painkillers for patients in the Columbus-area Mount Carmel Health System. He was indicted in cases involving at least 500 micrograms of the powerful painkiller fentanyl.

Prosecutors said ordering such dosages for a nonsurgical situation indicated an intent to end lives. Husel has pleaded not guilty and says he was providing comfort care for dying patients, not trying to kill them.

Over the next few weeks, jurors are expected to hear from at least 50 prosecution witnesses, likely medical experts, as well as additional defense witnesses.

The long-anticipated trial began minutes after assistant Franklin County prosecutor David Zeyen told Judge Michael Holbrook that he'd discussed the possibility with Husel's attorneys of a plea deal that would have reduced murder charges to reckless homicide with up to 30 years in prison, with early release a possibility. Zeyen emphasized that it wasn't a formal offer.

Husel attorney Jose Baez called it "an extremely reasonable starting point," but said his client wanted to move forward with a trial to have his day in court.

Prosecutors would provide evidence that Husel administered massive amounts of painkillers to patients, far more than was medically necessary to ease pain, assistant Franklin County prosecutor Janet Grubb said in an opening statement. The dosages were often given as ventilators were removed.

Instead of recommended dosages of 50 to 100 micrograms of fentanyl, Husel administered 600 to 2,000 micrograms at a time, Grubb said.

Grubb said that the reputation of Husel, a widely admired doctor with specialties in anesthesiology and critical care, allowed him to overcome concerns that staff working in the evening intensive care unit had about the excessive dosages.

"Ultimately, our case is about the fact that William Husel caused the death of our 14 victims," Grubb said.

Husel, 46, was originally charged with 25 counts of murder. Last month a judge agreed to dismiss 11 of those counts against Husel at the prosecution's request.

The 25 charges were brought in 2019 by a different prosecutor. Current Prosecutor Gary Tyack said in January 2021 that he favored dismissing some of the counts against Husel and proceeding with fewer cases.

Baez argued that Husel was trying to help patients, some in the last moments of their life, deal with their pain. He wasn't involved in medically assisted death, but in living well medically, he said.

"This case, ladies and gentlemen, is about 100% comfort care," Baez said during his opening statement. "A person's right to live their final moments in peace and dignity."

Baez suggested the state's case ignored the fact that multiple other health care professionals were involved in the patients' cases, and that Mount Carmel was more interested in protecting its Medicare and Medicaid patients once the news about the patient deaths broke than finding out what really happened.

Mount Carmel has reached settlements totaling more than $16.7 million over the deaths of at least 17 patients, with more lawsuits pending.

prosperity. Instead, land that once housed Greenwood's homes and businesses was made available for a train depot and other developments.

One can only estimate the generational wealth and opportunities lost to the survivors and descendants of the neighborhood, Goodwin said.

The massacre was all but lost to history before Tulsa lawmakers spearheaded a commission more than 20 years ago to study what was then called the Tulsa Race Riot, issuing its final report Feb. 28, 2001.

"This Commission fully understands that it is neither judge nor jury," reads the final report, issued to then-Gov. Frank Keating, former Tulsa Mayor Susan Savage, and other state leaders. "We have no binding legal authority to assign culpability, to determine damages, to establish a remedy, or to order either restitution or reparations.

"However, in our interim report in February, 2000 the majority of Commissioners declared that reparations to the historic Greenwood community in real and tangible form would be good public policy and do much to repair the emotional and physical scars of this terrible incident in our shared past," the report reads.

The commissioners recommended courses of action to include direct payments to riot survivors and descendants, a scholarship fund available to students affected by the riot, establishment of an economic development enterprise zone in the historic Greenwood district, and a memorial for the riot victims.

Goodwin requested an interim study in 2021 – the 100th anniversary of the massacre – to examine what efforts have been made to fulfill the commission's recommendations. Goodwin's interim study request was denied.

"So I did these bills anyway," Goodwin said.

The Legislature did follow through with a scholarship program. Goodwin presented her House Bill 4154, which would make some changes to the scholarship program, to members of the House Appropriations and Budget's subcommittee on Education on Monday. Discussion on the bill revealed the program is not well-known among the public or among lawmakers.

Goodwin requested the median family income to be eligible for the scholarships be raised from $70,000 – a cap implemented 20 years ago, she noted – to $120,000, and that the Free Application for Federal Student Aid form used to apply for financial aid for college or graduate school be used to apply for the scholarships. The bill also would provide descendants of those affected by the massacre be given priority.

A representative from the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education present at the meeting explained the scholarship program for committee members. The Legislature had formed two scholarships: one that would provide assistance for up to five years of college, and another program that awards a one-time, $1,000 payment to students for their freshman year.

The program was designed to accommodate up to 300 applicants per year. So far, only 159 scholarships – an average of eight per year – have been awarded, and all were for the one-time $1,000 scholarship. The scholarships are paid from interest on an $800,000 trust fund established for the purpose.

Lawmakers had several questions about the scholarship and how it is funded, and questioned raising the cap to $120,000, which some claimed would make the scholarships available to wealthy people.

"There were wealthy folks in Greenwood that had their homes burned, their buildings destroyed, their livelihoods destroyed, their generational wealth destroyed, so this scholarship shouldn't even have a cap," Goodwin replied. "Wealthy people were harmed, and I don't think $120,000 a year is wealthy if you've got a mother and a father in the house and you've got four kids. That doesn't go very far."

The committee chairman, state Rep. Mark McBride, R-Moore, said he "didn't really care for" the bill Goodwin presented, but he did care about what she was trying to accomplish.

"I offered to get with higher ed in our final budget deal to put $250,000 to $1 million in one-time money into the scholarship," McBride said. McBride said he didn't understand why Goodwin presented her bill "instead of taking money that would fund way more people than you have applying for the scholarships."

Goodwin said it was never her intent to trade additional funding for the policy changes proposed in HB 4154 to strengthen the program; she had hoped to do both. Goodwin said she is seeking $1.5 million for the fund. Funding all 300 scholarships available for the year would cost the state $300,000 – a fraction of the $38 million a year that goes to some other scholarship programs the state funds, she said.

The committee approved HB 4154 – just in time to meet the deadline for the bill to receive a hearing, Goodwin said. The measure next goes before the full Appropriations and Budget Committee.

Goodwin has not yet received word from the chairman as to whether her HB 4152 will receive a hearing before the full committee in time to meet the March 3 deadline. HB 4152 requests the state appropriate $300 million to the Oklahoma Department of Commerce to establish the Tulsa Race Massacre Victims' Compensation Revolving Fund.

The fund is to be used to "implement a program of reparations for damages to persons and property during the events of approximately May 31 through June 1, 1921, in the City of Tulsa which events shall be known as the 'Tulsa Race Massacre,'" reads the bill. "Expenditures from said fund shall be made upon warrants issued by the State Treasurer against claims filed as prescribed by law with the Director of the Office of Management and Enterprise Services for approval and payment."

"Seeking $300 million just says let's begin to do our part as it relates to the state," Goodwin said. Three centenarians who survived the massacre – Hughes Van Ellis Sr., Lessie Benningfield Randle and Viola Fletcher – are still alive today, but have yet to receive compensation from the state or city for their losses.

"They are deserving of some kind of justice," Goodwin said.

Amidst plans for an event to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the event, Tulsa-based nonprofit The Justice for Greenwood Foundation announced in June 2021 it would gift $100,000 to each of the three known living survivors of the 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre.

In 2021, President Joe Biden visited Greenwood for the commemoration and declared Juneteenth to be a national holiday. Tulsa Mayor G.T. Bynum issued an apology to the victims on behalf of the city. But none of the national or local leaders offered monetary compensation for the victims of the massacre.

Goodwin hopes this is the year something can be done to address the economic harm done to the residents of Greenwood, as the state apparently is in now a strong financial position.

"We've got $2.3 billion sitting in a rainy day fund, and we've yet to address the fire and the murder that occurred 100 years ago," Goodwin said.

The Williams CEO said the company has established "tremendous momentum" in setting the industry pace for executing transport, storage and delivery of reliable, low-cost, low-carbon energy.

"We expect strong natural gas market fundamentals and steadfast project execution to drive additional growth for our business in 2022," he said, "and we are extremely well positioned to continue serving the growing need for clean energy far into the future."

Williams owns and operates more than 30,000 miles of pipelines system-wide – including Transco, the nation's largest-volume and fastest-growing pipeline – and handles approximately 30% of natural gas used in the United States every day for power generation, heating and industrial use.

PUBLIC NOTICE

How much do public notices cost? The Oklahoma Legislature sets a rate, which is typically much lower than other newspaper ad rates, so the cost of notices can be controlled, and exact wording – rather than a summary – printed.

The public is well-served by notices published in a community newspaper.

STAND UP FOR Oklahoma's Public Lands

Oklahoma's public lands are a critical part of our state's economy, heritage and quality of life.

We have some of the most beautiful landscapes on earth that are incredibly rich in wildlife, generate over $13 billion in revenue and support more than 115,000 jobs.

The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the essential role of nature, recreation and outdoor spaces in the physical and mental health of every Oklahoman. These state and federally owned public lands are essential to the quality of life in Oklahoma for each economic class.

All of these benefits come from just over 6% of Oklahoma's total land.
We need your help to protect these precious public lands.

Ask your legislators to co-author the Oklahoma Public Lands Resolution at nature.org/okpubliclands.
